

Labor Government Of Britain Faces Appeal to People

Days of Labor Rule Over Great Britain Are Believed To Be Already Numbered.

LABORITES ATTEMPT TO PROLONG SWAY

Rocks of Half-Dozen Vexatious Questions Loom,
Any of Which May Wreck Craft.

BY CHARLES M. McCANN.
(Copyright, 1924, by United News.)
London, September 26.—Britain's first labor movement is sliding to the end of its career.

Conservatives and liberals alike today are preparing for a general election which, observers believe, "will mark a futile and mild 'finis' to the regime which entered into power with the vision of building a new world."

There is every indication that a general election may be precipitated within the next few weeks. New developments may possibly delay the election
until next spring, but Britain knows that the days of its labor rulers are already numbered.

The laborites are attempting to prolong their stay in office in the hope that their waning prestige will flame up again. The opposition is awaiting what seems to be the fitting moment for scuttling labor's craft.

Many Rocks Threaten.

In the early months of their period
in power the labor leaders sailed a triumphant course. Now they are among the rocks of a half dozen vexatious questions, on any one of which they may be wrecked. They have found that governing Britain was not as easy as it seemed. Labor began by boasting that it would solve the country's problems on assuming power.
But when the moment of assumption of power came, the labor leaders found it impossible suddenly to change
the governmental system without Rus-sianizing the country.

Within a few months after that day
when, with beating drums and challenging colors, labor entered office,
one of the laborite ministers, goaded
by opposition taunts, pleaded that "we can't evolve schemes like a magician
pulling rabbits out of a hat."

The opposition knew this. The opposition, and the country in general,
realized that labor had done its best.
But members of the labor leaders' own party failed to see why labor had not launched its new world.

Ruined by Either Course.

A situation has now arisen in which, if the laborites please their own powerful left wing, they will be defeated, while unless they keep them amenable, the party eventually will split. The labor government is between the stone wall of its opponents,
and the prodding horns of its own supporters. It must inevitably sooner or later be smashed from the front or punctured from the rear.

Parliament met in a special session Tuesday to pass a bill instituting a commission to delimit the Ulster boundary. If the Tory house of lords defeat the measure (an unlikely but possible development), an election automatically would be precipitated in accordance with Premier MacDonald's promise to President
Cosgrave of the Irish Free State.

Otherwise, the regular session of parliament will commence on October 28, with the conservatives and liberals primed to attack the government on housing, unemployment and other questions, and on the Russian loan in particular.

The labor government agreed to guarantee the loan at the insistence of its own radical members after negotiations with the soviet had collapsed.

Admit Defensive Course.

The laborites realize that they are on the defensive. They have nothing to gain from an early election, for hence they have decided that, if possible, they will remain in office until spring, accepting any defeat except absolute vital ones. At the same time, they will introduce in succession purely labor bills, which will culminate in radical taxation measures in next spring's budget.

The success of this plan depends on the liberals. The liberal party, caught between conservatism and radicalism, has been the football of both parties, and must be most careful in selecting the favorable moment to join the conservatives in ejecting
the laborites.

Whenever the election comes it will result probably in a return of the conservatives to power.

DAKOTA GASOLINE PRICES TAKE DROP AS STATE RETAILS

Sioux Falls, S. D., September 26.
Local independent oil dealers today
met the announcement that the state would begin retail sale of gasoline
here tomorrow at 15 cents a gallon, including a two-cent tax, with the announcement that they would install pumping stations separate from their established filling stations and sell gasoline at 15 cents a gallon at the regular tanks.

COUPLE IN POISON PLOT PLACE BLAME UPON EACH OTHER

Minister Hight Declares
Mrs. Sweetin Tempted
Him—She Is Bitter Against Pastor-Lover.

Mt. Vernon, Ill., September 26.— Terror-stricken over the public demand that they hang for their poison murders, the Rev. Lawrence M.
Hight, Methodist minister, and the woman he loved, Mrs. Elsie Sweetin, now blame each other for their crimes.

In messages to State's Attorney Thompson, the minister, who until recently was one of the spiritual leaders of the little community of Mt. Vernon, said:

"She attracted me. She tempted me.
My wife was cold. Mrs. Sweetin lured me and I forgot my God and fell.
I did what she wanted me to do."

Hight Breaks Down.

Hight, confined at Nashville as a precaution against possible mob violence, has completely broken down.
He had lengthy fits of weeping Friday, and news that a committee of his fellow ministers had recommended that he be expelled from the ministry
took away his last vestige of restraint.

In the Salem jail, Mrs. Sweetin had several collapses.

She has become bitter against her pastor-lover.

"He made me do it, he made me
do it, God forgive me," she moaned
in what became a litany of grief.

"He must have drugged me or hypnotized me. Perhaps I think he put something in the candy he gave me, as he always told me not to let anybody else eat it. I was his to do with as he pleased. I had no power to resist him."

Refused Him Nothing.

"He told me he loved me. My husband was indifferent and he paid little attention to me. Brother Hight was fascinating and strong. He said he loved me and he put his arms around me and I loved him, too. I could not refuse him anything."

"He is to blame. I had no power to resist him, and when he gave me the poison and told me he would make me the happiest woman in the world
if I would do away with Wilford, I thought it the right thing to do. He quoted Scripture to me to persuade me."

Woman Prisoner, Seeking Husband, Escapes in Vain

Breaks Arm in Prison Flight and Now Lies Sobbing
at Grady.

Life's not an empty dream—it's a nightmare.

That is the opinion of Mrs. W. H.
Allen, of 276 Central avenue. She is a pretty brunette, and she lies weeping at Grady hospital.

Here's why Mrs. Allen weeps.

Tiring of the drag and monotonous prison life at the city stockade and overwhelmed by a desire to see again her husband, Mrs. Allen improvised a rope of sheets. Fastening it to a door of a room on the third story of the prison building she dropped it. It looked strong enough.

She began her perilous descent to the ground. Inch by inch she clambered down the side of the stone wall. But about midway the rope that looked strong proved too weak. It snapped, and Mrs. Allen plunged to the ground. Her left arm was broken above the elbow. It pained her dreadfully—but she did not cry out.

On her hands and knees she crawled out of the prison yard, and to the ground. There she got in a jitney bus which brought her to the home of her husband at 345 1-2 Peachtree street.
Her broken arm dangling by her side,
she staggered up to her room. But he was gone. She barred the doors and waited.

Door Forced.

Soon there came a knocking at the door. But the voice was not that of her husband and she did not open.
And when the lock was broken and the door swung open she faced two detectives. That was four weeks ago.
She was dressed, and there she remains until it heals. Close by the doorway sits a police guard, who not only watches Mrs. Allen, but adds to her misery—just by being there.

Mrs. Allen, sobbing convulsively
all the while, told the story of her escape. Three others had planned to make the venture, and probably would have done so had they not behold the fate of Mrs. Allen. She was dread of the monotony of prison life
and especially of the dining table menu. And she wanted to see her husband. That's what gave her courage to flee the prison. Besides, she says, she thought the rope was strong.

SMITH NOMINATION STIRS DEMOCRATS OF EMPIRE STATE

Wild Yells of Approval Greet His Choice for Fourth Time as Gubernatorial Candidate.

ASSAILS NATIONAL AND STATE G. O. P.

Calls Coolidge a Myth and Roosevelt Only a Name—Hails Davis as Ablest Democrat.

Election of Ticket "Foregone Conclusion"

New York, September 26.—The renomination of Governor Smith makes the election of the entire democratic ticket in New York state "a foregone conclusion," said
a statement by John W. Davis, democratic presidential candidate
issued at the eastern headquarters of the party's national committee here today.

"Both as a citizen and a democrat," said Mr. Davis' statement,
"I am more than pleased by the action of the Syracuse convention in renominating Governor Smith.
By universal consent New York
has never had a better governor,
nor one who more thoroughly understood the machinery of the state."

Syracuse, N. Y., September 26.— Arousing the same wild enthusiasm that was accorded him by his supporters at the national convention, Governor Al Smith has been nominated by the democratic state convention to run for reelection against Colonel Theodore Roosevelt.

Smith was chosen by acclamation.
His choice was unanimous. There were no other candidates and as the roll was called for the vote, a series of lusty yells for "Alfred E. Smith" flowed forth in uninterrupted succession.

Smith now assumes the task of beating victory Roosevelt and the still heavier burden of carrying New York for John W. Davis. Appearing before the convention late Friday afternoon, Smith accepted the nomination. He was greeted with a thunderous roar
of cheers and applause that recalled
the tumult he caused at Madison Square garden.

Would Have Liked Rest.

The governor told of his hesitancy
over accepting the nomination.
"I felt that I would like to take a rest," he said, "and not make the race
a fourth time. However, I was unable to answer the arguments of certain of our leaders. I know how much the country needs the democratic party and I know how this state needs
a continuance of it."

He praised John W. Davis, presidential nominee, as the "ablest democrat in the United States."

"I never ran away from a fight and I never will. I will make the race and I accept the nomination."

Smith will run on a platform which contains unequivocal condemnation of the Ku Klux Klan and insists on modification of the Volstead act to permit beer and light wines, subject to the approval of the people of the state.

"Launching into an attack on the republican administration at Washington and the republican assembly at Albany, Smith declared:

"We will have four solid weeks in which to show up the record. Nomi-

ROOSEVELT OFFERS HIS RESIGNATION

Coolidge Tells Callers Nomination of Young Teddy for Governor Is Very Strong One.

Washington, September 26.—Theodore Roosevelt, who was nominated yesterday as the republican nominee for governor of New York, called on President Coolidge this morning and formally presented his resignation as assistant secretary of the navy, which was accepted by the president.

Returning to the navy department, Colonel Roosevelt began at once the task of clearing his desk. An impromptu reception followed as a line of officers and civilians associated with him during much of the past four years formed in his office to present their felicitations.

Mrs. Roosevelt intends to accompany her husband on his tour of the state.
President Coolidge considers the selection of Colonel Roosevelt as the republican candidate for governor of New York a very strong nomination,
he told friends today after Mr. Roosevelt had called twice at the white house, once to present his resignation as assistant secretary of the navy and again to pose for pictures with the president.

Nude Beauty Fails To See Why Figure Worries Hylan

BY ROBERT D. LUSK.

New York, September 26.—The unclad feminine form is beautiful and artistic whether it is seen on the stage, in person or reflected in the paintings of the old masters, and if Mayor Hylan or his dramatic censorship committee wish to reform anything on Broadway they had better begin with the audience.

Thus Kathryn Ray, a beautiful blond who displays her natural beauty in its entirety, or nearly so, in one of the new Broadway revues, answers the official reformers who have made her the storm center of the latest move to make the New York stage safe for soldiers, sailors and visiting buyers.

"I can't understand why they pick on me," Kathryn complains. "Really the picture that I am the center of is beautiful. I wear skin trunks around my waist and the lighting effects make it statuesque and as artistic as anything shown in any artist museum. The reformers wouldn't daub paint across a Greuze or throw a gunny sack over a Nus just because the poor girls are naked."

Kathryn, whose panties are six inches long, north and south, and comprise an entire costume, has one of those boyish figures. And has made considerable money and received no little front-page publicity on that score.

Meanwhile the battle of "art versus morality" rages on Broadway and box office receipts mount.
Threats are made hourly to force
Kathryn to pose in a bathrobe.

DAVIS CHALLENGES SERVICE OF G. O. P.

Democratic Nominee Likens Government to Board of Directors Subject To Being Fired.

BY THE ASSOCIATED PRESS.

Bluefield, W. Va., September 26.—
John W. Davis, democratic standard-bearer, closed a two-day campaign in his native state of West Virginia here tonight with an address to an audience, not only of West Virginians,
but including many from the "mother
state," Virginia.

Discussions of the responsibility of the American people to be of service to all mankind, the denunciation of government of special privilege and the declaration that his observations
in the western campaign gave him assurance of victory, marked speeches
from his train during the two days.

Today carried the candidate along the Tug river that separates West Virginia and Kentucky and here to the Virginia border. Ten stops were made during the day, but at few was there time for discussion of political topics. Mr. Davis contenting himself mainly with expressing the pleasure
he and Mrs. Davis felt at being again among the home people and with introducing candidates on the state ticket who accompanied him.

Finds New Stimulus.

Speaking at Williamson he likened
the presidential election to a session of stockholders deciding whether to re-elect their board of directors.

"If the services have been satisfactory and the board is faithful and intelligent they re-elect them," he said. "If the management has been inefficient and the board of directors
has been unsatisfactory, as sensible people they call for a change. I think the American people have made up their minds to call for a change."

Mentioning oil reserves, the veterans' bureau and the department of justice he renewed his insistence that every political party must answer for the deeds or failure of men they put in office, and continued:

"They tell us by presidential dispensation there has been a change in general manager; that the old firm
still is doing business under the same name; that the board of directors still has not altered; but providence has installed a new general manager who has the power to take over all the assets, if he can discover any, of the old concern, but is not to be charged with any of the liabilities. I do not believe that sort of reorganization will work in this country."

Coming into McDowell county, Mr.
Davis continued on Page 5, Column 7.

DAVES DISCLAIMS CREDIT FOR PLAN

Success of Experts' Committee on Reparations
Due to Group Effort of Five Nations, He Admits

St. Cloud, Minn., September 26.—
Credit for success of the reparations settlement plan was disclaimed by Charles G. Dawes, republican vice presidential candidate, here tonight in his German center of Minnesota.

"While my name has been attached to the report of the experts' committee, it was a group effort, for representatives of five nations participated in the framing of that report," Mr.
Dawes said. "It wouldn't be fair for me to take credit even this far from the scene of action."

Mr. Dawes made this statement in responding to a laudatory introduction by Judge John A. Roeder, of St.
Cloud, who acclaimed the republican nominee as the author of the settlement plan bearing his name. He also made it in reply to some republican leaders who have urged him to discuss the reparations plan as an appeal to Minneapolis' heavy German vote.

"The efforts of the experts' committee were successful and the plan
outlined on Page 5, Column 4.

Keep Moving— Forward!

There's no need to tell everybody to keep on the move, all right. The only trouble is that too many of them are traveling backward.

All the progress you've already made is good for just one thing—to give you momentum for greater advancement. The minute you begin to rest on your oars you're starting in the wrong direction.

Keeping on the move means keeping on your toes and on the aggressive. Dig in afresh and start forward again—if you're really going to arrive!

It's always a move in the right direction when you turn to the Constitution's Classified Section.

DAVIS TO INSTILL SOME NEW GINGER IN ORGANIZATION

Democratic Candidate
Plans To Inject Fresh Supply of Enthusiasm
Into Party Headquarters

MANY TROUBLE SPOTS NEED HIS ATTENTION

Shaver To Get Needed
Help in Ironing Out Rough Spots for Final Drive to Polls.

BY RAYMOND CLAPPER.

Washington, September 26.—John W. Davis will devote part of his time in Washington Saturday to morale work among those in charge of national campaign headquarters here.
Conditions in the nerve center of the campaign organization have not been as good as had been hoped for, with the result that the burden of the fight has fallen pretty much on the lone shoulders of Davis as it did on Cox
four years ago.

Barely a month of the campaign remains and it is the most critical month of all, the one which will decide the outcome, hence the concern of Davis that the full force of his organization be made effective.

The campaign machinery has never recovered entirely from the disorganized start it got because of the long bitter factional fight in Madison Square Garden.

Disappointed in McAdoo.

McAdoo has just returned, but the hope that his coming inspired has been somewhat damped, for the defeated California candidate did not warm up to the ticket as the Davis workers had expected. Davis was most cordial in sending McAdoo a radio as the steamer was coming in. But on arrival McAdoo was somewhat uncertain as to his speaking plans. He called for a bundle of Davis' speeches,
and when he did issue his statement,
he devoted most of his attention to advocating the League of Nations.

Friends of Davis had expected Mc-Adoo to come forth with a two-faced declaration for the ticket, and were a little disappointed at the faint praises which emanated instead.

There have been rumors of dissatisfaction over the sort of cooperation
received from the Bryan brothers, too,
but since those began to circulate,
Charles W. Bryan has announced a speaking itinerary that will carry him into several of the mid-eastern states, and the feeling is better now.

Bred by Propaganda.

Part of the trouble arose undoubtedly through propaganda circulated by hostile workers to the effect that Bryan nursed secret hopes of seeing La Follette throw the election into congress, where the democratic vice presidential candidate would have a good chance of coming out on top.

There have been other troubles relating to management of speaking reunions. One change of personnel resulted but reports that Secretary Key Pittman, who finally took charge of Davis' speaking engagements, was about to quit have been denied and harmony has been restored there.

Most of the trouble now is the national committee organization and the political hierarchy of workers extending out into the state and county organizations. It centers around Clem Shaver, chairman of the democratic national committee. Shaver is working hard and doing his best, but the results have not, frankly, been what were expected.

Has Tough Job.

Shaver is new in national politics
and in the short time at his disposal
he has been unable to pull together
the discordant factions left after the New York convention. He has disgruntled McAdoo followers to contend with on the one hand, and the big city bosses like George Brennan on the other.

In addition there are other jeal-ousies among lieutenants around headquarters. Davis hopes to wipe out some of these and to instill some of his own enthusiasm into the workers during his short stay here. He will also be a guest of the National Press club at luncheon, leaving in the afternoon for Wilmington, Del.,
where he speaks Saturday night.

TWO ARE ARRESTED IN BOND FORGERY; ONE HAS CONFESSED

New York, September 26.—Two men were arrested today in connection with the circulation of several hundred thousand dollars worth of bonds, made in imitation of the bonds of the Steel & Tube Co. of America.
One of the prisoners was alleged to have confessed.

Those under arrest are Frank Allen Miller, Montclair, N. J., an official of the L. E. Bon Ray corporation, and Edward Feist of Atlantic Highlands, N. J. Assistant District Attorney Gibbs said that Miller, whose company was alleged to have caused the circulation of the spurious bonds, had made a partial confession.

The efforts of the experts' com-
outlined on Page 5, Column 4.

BIG DIRIGIBLE TO SAIL FOR AMERICA NEXT WEEK.

Lakehurst, N. J., September 26.—
The giant dirigible ZR-3, which has been built in Germany for the United States, will sail for this country next week, probably on Wednesday, according to Commander E. H. Klein, Jr., head of the naval air station here,
who is now in Friedrichshafen.
Klein made this announcement in reporting by cable the successful completion of the ZR-3 34-hour test flight.

Arbitration Pact Encounters Snag In Jap Attitude

WIDOW IS KILLED, DAUGHTER IS SHOT AFTER ARGUMENT

Grain Dealer Is Missing
After Double Shooting in Exclusive Suburb of Cincinnati.

Cincinnati, September 26.—Mrs.
Frances D. Rawson, widow of Warren Rawson, former pork packer, was shot to death in her home here tonight. Her daughter, Miss Nina Rawson, was shot in the left arm and neck. A second daughter escaped injury by fleeing from the house.

The police are searching for Vinto
Perin, grain dealer.

The condition of Miss Nina Rawson is not considered serious. She was removed to a hospital. The shooting was done in the dining room of the Rawson home in the exclusive suburb of Clifton.

Ida Schluter, housekeeper, who was in an adjoining room, said that a man whom she believed was Perin, son-in-law of Mrs. Rawson, came into the dining room and made some mention of money. A few heated exchanges followed, Miss Schluter said,
and then came the report of a gun.

Perin, who is 50 years old, is alleged to have fled from the rear door of the house, and could not be located by the police early tonight.

Money Is Demanded.

Miss Nina Rawson said she, her mother and her sister, Josephine, were chatting in the dining room when Perin entered. Without much parley, he came direct to the point and demanded money, she said.

"You are trying to make my wife
a slave to a bunch of hum college students. Now I need financial help and if you don't help me, I will cause a scandal," Miss Rawson said he told them.

"We asked him what would cause a scandal and he replied by drawing a revolver and starting to shoot. He shot the first shot at me. Then he shot mother, who was sitting in her chair. The third shot he fired again at me. I called to Josephine to run out and get help and she ran out of the house. He ran out just behind her. I don't know where they went."

Wrist Is Fractured.

Mrs. Rawson's wrist was fractured.
Police believed that Perin, in an effort to make his mother-in-law comply with his demand for financial assistance, grabbed her wrist and twisted it so severely that the bones in the aged woman's wrist were broken.

Perin, the police were told, formerly was a member of the firm, Perin Brothers, millers, which was dissolved
two years ago following a fist fight between Perin and his brother, Lyman.

It was said he had asked for more money with which to renew milling operations than his relatives could raise conveniently and the request was refused.

Endurance Test Of Big Dirigible Proves Success

Huge Zeppelin Greeted With Tremendous Enthusiasm
on 34-Hour Cruise.

Berlin, September 26.—After a 34-hour endurance test in which she swept the length of Germany, flew over the Baltic sea, and hovered over Denmark and Sweden, the giant dirigible ZR-3, built here for the United States, returned successfully to her hangar at Friedrichshafen at 7:05
p. m. Friday.

The Zeppelin sailed into difficult-ties when the time came to descend to earth and for an hour the German engineers and pilots who compose the crew struggled to bring the giant craft to a safe landing. The ZR-3 moved back and forth above the home

HAMBRICK HELD TO HIGHER COURT ON TWO COUNTS

Guy Hambrick, 22, of Hapeville, Friday was awaiting trial in the state court under two charges, one of operating an automobile while under the influence of whisky, and another of unlawfully possessing whisky, following his arraignment in police court, where he also drew a fine of $51.

Hambrick, who, according to the police, gave the name of T. H. and G. H. Harris, and his address as Sarasota, Fla., at the time of his arrest last Sunday, was driving the automobile in which Joe Byrd, also 22, of 478 North Jackson street, was riding at the time the latter was wounded by Officer H. J. Waters in Piedmont avenue, near Ellis street.

Byrd, the police claim, struck Officer Waters in an effort to knock him from the automobile, and then pulled an open knife from his hip pocket. At this point, Officer Waters stated in his report to Captain Grover C. Fain, he shot the bullet passing through the fleshy part of Byrd's right arm and piercing his chest.

No charge has been made against Byrd yet. He was kept in the Grady hospital two days for observation by the doctors.

New Champion Is Crowned

WOMAN WINS IN GREATEST TIME-WASTING AVOCATION

In Cross-Word Puzzle Test

BY LYLE C. WILSON.
New York, September 26.—Just 4 minutes and 26 seconds after the starter's signal at the first national all-comers' cross-word puzzle tournament, a new world champion emerged from the field of several hundred female addicts to the iniquitous art of puzzling.

With a shriek of scratching pencils and an obligato of rustling paper, the women, ranging in age and demeanor from flappers to grandmas, determined the momentous question of who is most proficient at the greatest time-wasting avocation ever conceived.

Mrs. William von Phul, whose husband thinks cross-word puzzles are silly and who won't have a thing to do with them himself, is the new women's singles champion. Mrs. von Phul now takes her place in the stellar firmament of sport along with the world's champion tiddley-winkler and the man who stumped the world some time ago by spinning a put-and-take top for 70 seconds with his left hand, although he was not naturally a port slider. There was little, if any, applause. Defeated contestants

Escaped Convicts

Wound Officers

In Gun Battle

Alma, Ga., September 26.—(Special.)—Carlton Johnson, escaped convict, is in Bacon county jail with a special guard over him. Olin Wages, Johnson's pal, is in jail at Douglas, according to information here, and Sheriff J. W. George, of Bacon county, and Deputy Sheriff J. H. Thomas are suffering from bullet wounds as the result of a gun battle with the fugitives at a bridge near Nichols late last night. Both officers will recover, doctors announced today.

Johnson and Wages escaped from the convict camp, where they were serving time for burglary, about three weeks ago, and it is alleged they attacked Wash Nelson, of this county, while they were at liberty. They were brought here after their capture last Sunday afternoon to stand trial for shooting Nelson, but escaped early Monday morning, fled to a nearby swamp and are said to have declared that they would not be taken alive.

Immediately after the escape Bacon officials surrounded the swamp and made efforts to capture the prisoners, but were unsuccessful until they were informed that the men planned to go to Florida last night in an automobile driven by Otis Wilcox. Johnson and Wages, who were held up on the machine and took Wilcox and Johnson, who killed himself recently, wounding the sheriff and his deputy, Sheriff George says.

It is expected that a quick trial will be held for the prisoners.

PULLMAN SURCHARGE

ARGUMENT COMPLETED

Washington, September 26.—Final argument for and against abolition of the railroad surcharge on Pullman travel was heard today by the interstate commerce commission.

Representatives of the nation's railroad, contending that the carriers render a service to the Pullman passenger for which they are not otherwise reimbursed, claimed that to end the surcharge would add a burden to them which would be unjustified in view of present passenger earnings.

Spokesmen for national traveling salesmen's organizations based their opposition to continuance of the surcharge mainly on the contention that it was created for an emergency which no longer exists.

Abolition of the surcharge was recommended to the commission by its examiners after an investigation and the commission then heard testimony from both sides. The arguments today constitute the final step before the commission's decision.

Democrats Reject

Pro-League Plank

In New Hampshire

Concord, N. H., September 26.—The democratic state convention today refused to adopt a platform plank endorsing the league of nations, although Bainbridge Colby, secretary of state under President Wilson, had declared in his keynote speech that the national convention "made a mistake in ducking this issue." The plank provoked the only discussion on the platform.

The platform adopted scored the Ku Klux Klan by name, advocated abolition of women's poll taxes, strict enforcement of the prohibition laws.

Besides his strong plea for the league, Bainbridge Colby attacked the Ku Klux Klan, declaring that it had no place in American thought. He assailed the Harding and Coolidge administration, and referring to the La Follette-Wheeler ticket he said: "The constitution should and must be upheld. The proposition of La Follette to give congress power to rule upon the constitutionality of its own acts is foolish and should be given no thought."

DENVER, September 26.—Returning to Denver today from a visit at his father's summer home, near Hayden, Colo., Courtland S. Dines, Denver clubman and broker, in an interview with The Denver Post, emphatically denied rumors that have been current during the last week that he and Miss Edna Purviance, motion picture actress, were married. Asked whether or not they were engaged Dines replied it was "nobody's business."

PASTOR SENTENCED

TO JAIL AND FINED

ON SERIOUS CHARGE

Buffalo, N. Y., September 26.—The Rev. C. Penfold, pastor of a Methodist Episcopal church of this city, today was sentenced to 30 days in jail and fined $50 by a justice of the peace on a charge of outraging public decency. The Rev. Mr. Penfold was arrested in an automobile last week with a woman whom he declared in court to be his wife. The woman later appeared and swore to a statement that she was Mrs. Freda Lohr.

Attorneys for the clergyman prepared to appeal the sentence. Rev. Penfold denied the charge against him, explaining in court that he had Mrs. Lohr pose as his wife in hopes of escaping unwelcome publicity.

Rev. Penfold last night was reported to have prepared a letter of resignation from the ministry, but Bishop Adna W. Leonard declared a resignation impossible and the letter was withdrawn.

STAR OF BROADWAY

IS SUED FOR $100,000

FOR THEFT OF LOVE

Minneapolis, N. Y., September 26.—Wilda Vonniet, vivacious star of a Broadway show, was sued for $100,000 in an alienation of affection action filed today by Mrs. Katherine M. Frey, young wife of Charles Conrad Frey, formerly of Louisville, Ky. Mrs. Frey was formerly Katherine Meltyre, a noted southern beauty, whose family, as well as that of Frey, was prominent socially.

The Freys moved to New York a few months after their marriage in November, 1919, but spent much of their time traveling back and forth between New York, Louisville and New Orleans.

Mrs. Frey alleges that her husband met Miss Bennett at the race track at Louisville in July of last year, and that he became infatuated with her. The brief complaint merely recites that Miss Bennett, knowing Frey was married, enticed him away from his wife.

Frey was said to have brought a divorce action at St. Louis some time ago, charging his wife with desertion. She answered with a counter suit in the same court, charging misconduct with an unnamed woman.

Charges of Forgery

Against Mrs. Harris

Dismissed by Jury

New York, September 26.—A third degree forgery charge against Mrs. Eleanor Elaine Lee Harris, former wife of Beverly D. Harris, one-time vice president of the National City bank, was dismissed today by the grand jury.

LA FOLLETTE'S PLEA TO REHEAR DENIED

San Francisco, September 26.—A petition for a rehearing of the court's decision denying the La Follette election in California a place on the November ballot was denied today by the state supreme court.

The order of denial was accompanied by any opinion or comment. It was signed by Chief Justice Myers. Three dissenting orders were handed down by Justices Lawler, Beawell and Lennon, but the order signed by Justice Myers represented the majority of the court.

The order acts to invalidate the petitions filed yesterday with six county clerks to place the La Follette election on the California ballot. These petitions had been filed in anticipation of a decision from the court favorable to the candidacy of the senator.

Make Statement Later.
The La Follette campaign managers here said that they would make a statement later.

The issue in regard to the La Follette election was first raised when the county clerk of Marion county refused to permit the filing of a petition to place such election on the ballot, on the ground that they had not been selected through party organization, and the law was ambiguous as to how they should be selected otherwise.

The La Follette organization, through Rudolph Spreckels, its leader, sought a writ of mandate to compel the clerk to certify the election for the November election, holding that it was the spirit and intent of the law that suffrage should not be limited to partisan organizations.

The court, in denying the application for the writ last Wednesday, held that the election could not be considered as public officers and therefore could not be nominated by petition.

ACTION IS THREATENED IN LOUISIANA COURTS.
New Orleans, September 26.—Court action in an effort to have the names of Senators La Follette and Wheeler placed on the ballot in Louisiana was threatened today by La Follette leaders as a result of a ruling by Assistant Attorney General Ogden relative to the qualifications of those voters who sign the petitions to have them placed on the ticket.

It was held that only those persons who had declared upon registering that they were independent voters were qualified to sign the petition necessary to have the names placed on the ballot. Only a handful of such persons are registered in the city of New Orleans. The petition, bearing at least 1,000 signatures, must be filed with the secretary of state by tomorrow night.

J. J. Fineran, head of the La Follette organization, said the petition, with the names of at least 1,000 registered voters, would be presented tomorrow to Thomas Killen, registrar of voters of Orleans parish, and that upon the refusal of the registrar to certify the signatures, the petition then would be taken to the secretary of state at Baton Rouge Monday, as provided by law.

"If the secretary of state refuses to accept the petition, we will fight it out in the courts," Mr. Fineran said.

The ruling from the attorney general's office held that only those persons registered with no party affiliation, or as independents, were qualified to sign the nomination papers for presidential electors of independent candidates, and cited an act of the legislature of 1916 to that effect.

PETITIONS SEEK TO CLEAR WASHINGTON SITUATION.
Olympia, Wash., September 26.—Three petitions for alternative writs of mandamus to prevent the secretary of state from certifying names of presidential electors of "the La Follette independent progressive" and the "independent" parties, the names of candidates for state offices nominated by the "La Follette state party" were filed today with the clerk of the supreme court.

The petitions were filed by Edgar C. Snyder, member of the state executive committee of the progressive party of Washington state and set forth that the progressive party of the state of Washington is the only genuine ticket in the state in behalf of the presidential candidacy of Robert M. La Follette.

BUTLER IS EMPHATIC IN DENYING INTERFERENCE.
Chicago, September 26.—William M. Butler, chairman of the republican national committee, today issued a statement, denying that republican leaders had anything to do with court action in California, which resulted in barring La Follette presidential electors from a place on the ballot. The statement said he had begun an "investigation of the circumstances which resulted in court action," and added:

"The republican national committee and no one in its behalf had any part whatever in the proceedings, nor anything to do with the nature of the investigation. I am also advised to-day that neither the republican state organization and the Coolidge and Dawes organization in California, of which Mark Requa is director, nor the national committee of California, nor republican officials connected with the local campaign, were parties in any manner to the proceedings in any way."

SMITH NOMINATION STIRS DEMOCRATS

nate a myth in Washington and a name in New York and expect to get away with it? It can't be done."

Won't Hurt Him.
Smith recounted that a republican friend had informed him that Senator Wadsworth was an old-time friend of his and would do nothing to hurt him. "And when I heard of the action of the convention at Boston," he said, "he didn't, the governor added."

He characterized the republican state platform as "one of the most dishonest documents ever written," adding:

"And what I won't do to that! When I get through with it, the men who wrote it will be looking with a blackjack for the men who gave them the stuff to put in the platform. The renomination of Smith was accompanied by a demonstration lasting 15 minutes, during which time the delegates paraded through the hall in one of the most enthusiastic outbursts the party has ever witnessed in this state."

KLAN IS DENOUNCED WINES, BEER DEMANDED.
Syracuse, N. Y., September 26.—A vigorous denunciation of the Ku Klux Klan and demand for modification of the Volstead act to permit sale of light wines and beer were the substance of the democratic platform adopted at the state convention today.

In naming the Ku Klux Klan, reference was made to the pledge of the national democratic platform to "defend and maintain the constitutional liberties of all citizens, of all races, of all classes and of all religions" and "the democratic party."

"We unequivocally condemn the Ku Klux Klan. It seeks to subject the sovereign state to the will and whims of its own invisible empire. It further seeks to create intolerance by secret appeal and masked attack against particular classes based on race, religion or color. Its object and activities are diametrically opposed to the fundamental principles upon which our government was founded and to the liberal principles of the democratic party."

G. O. P. Corruption Attacked.
"Republican corruption" in Washington was attacked, with particular reference to the oil disclosures and the Fordney-McCumber tariff act.

There was also included a plank favoring extension of the soldier bonus law to "provide for the dependents of men who gave their lives overseas for our country."

The platform insists that Congress enact "such modification of the Volstead act as shall legalize, subject to approval of the people of the state of New York, the use of beer and light wines."

The issue of the campaign, asserts the platform, is "honesty in government."

"The republican leaders," it continues, "want the electorate to forget the astounding revelation of republican corruption. They want the nation to forget that the republican candidate for president presided over the senate and sat with the cabinet while the sick and wounded veterans of the World war were neglected and mistreated, and while millions of public funds appropriated for their benefit were stolen and squandered."

Hard Rap at Coolidge.
The republican leaders want the people to forget that their national candidates, though fully informed, remained silent while the nation's priceless naval oil reserves, set aside for national defense, were secretly and corruptly turned over to the favor of capitalists for exploitation."

Asserting that "Mr. Coolidge was not big enough to pass a single important administration measure," the platform declares that "general chaos was prevented only by constructive democratic leadership."

The platform favored development of state-owned water power; restoration of the river primary for the nomination of all elective offices; legislation prohibiting the issuance of injunctions in labor disputes "without reasonable notice and without first having a hearing to establish the facts," a 48-hour week for women and minors in industry; minimum wage board in the department of labor, with power to recommend a living wage for women and children; child welfare legislation and removal of unjust discriminations against women."

COUPLE IN POISON PLOT BLAME EACH OTHER

that it was right and I thought anything he said could not be wrong."

Asked whether she still loved the man, Mrs. Sweetin replied:

"I am not sure that I ever loved him, not with a real love. Real love would never lead anybody to do such a terrible thing. I must have been crazy. I have been in a dream most of the time."

Twice during the day Mrs. Sweetin repudiated the confession she made, admitting she had killed her husband at Hight's suggestion. Then she said that if she made any such confession, she must have been hypnotized and that she did not recall any of it.

Fear Suicide Attempt.
Mrs. Sweetin's peculiar actions have resulted in a constant watch on her. Jail attendants fear she may attempt to take her life. Some physicians here do not believe that the woman is sane, and they think she may have been insane at the time of the murder. She appeared to be on the verge of nervous breakdown.

While friends of Hight and Mrs. Sweetin are preparing to see to it that they are provided with adequate counsel, the state's attorney is busy preparing what he calls "a hanging case."

"Out here in this country we don't believe much in nonsense," Thompson explained. "This is a clear-cut case. The man and woman deliberately plotted a horrible crime. At first, when the minister told me about it and said he killed both people, I was inclined to think, perhaps, he was crazy. But I know that neither of the two are insane and I will ask that they hang."

The prosecutor was much interested in an account of the meeting of the day between Hight and a committee of ministers, sent from the Carbondale conference to examine him. During this meeting Hight signed a new confession, admitting full responsibility for the murder he committed and for his part in the poisoning of Wilford Sweetin.

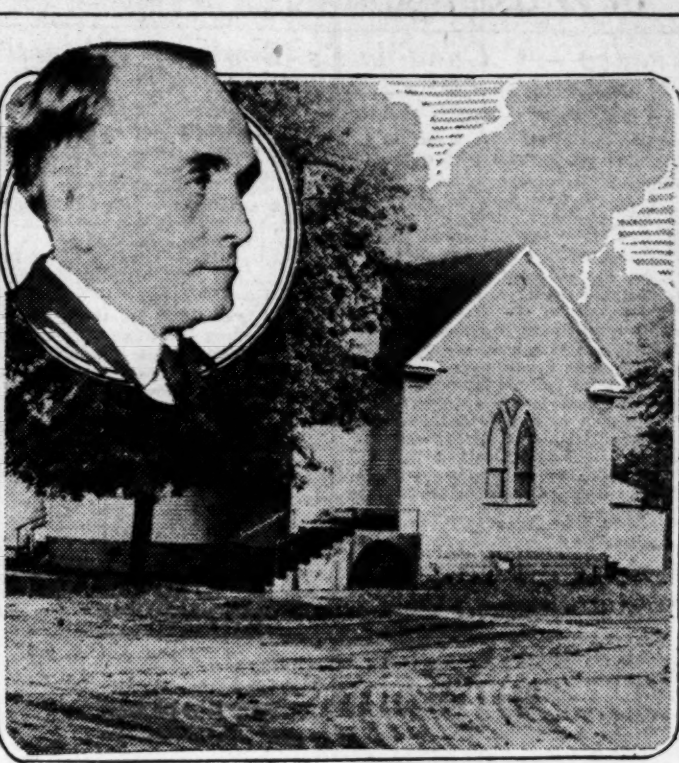

HIGH IS EXPELLED FROM THE MINISTRY.
Carbondale, Ill., September 26.—(By the Associated Press.)—Lawrence M. Hight, of Ina, confessed poison slayer of his wife, Anna, and the instigator of the poisoning of Wilford Sweetin, also of Ina, was expelled from the ministry of the Methodist Episcopal church this evening. Expulsion was voted by the "select number" of the Southern Illinois conference of church in session here since Wednesday.

Action of the "select number," a committee that conducted the church trial of the case, is regarded as final and the report to the conference tomorrow, it was explained, is a mere formality, thus making the decision of the committee final.

The case was taken up before the committee in the form of a court trial, with the Rev. J. S. Cummins, representing the prosecution, and the Rev. T. B. Sower defending the accused minister. Evidence was introduced by the Rev. C. H. Hall, superintendent of the Mount Vernon jail, where he obtained a complete confession from Hight.

Other evidence was furnished by the Rev. Cummins, who submitted

Church Where "Poison Pastor" Preached "Thou Shalt Not Kill"

Homes must be found for five little children as the result of the murder of Mrs. Lawrence Hight and Wilford Sweetin, which the Rev. Mr. Hight and Mrs. Elsie Sweetin, lovers, have confessed. a statement obtained yesterday from Hight in the county jail at Nashville. Only one point was brought out in the plea of the defense. That was requested for mitigation on the grounds of possible insanity of the accused minister. The plea was made by the Rev. Sower. The vote of the committee, or the "select number," was unanimous, it was said.

MRS. SWEETIN TAKES FIRST FOOD SINCE ARREST.
Salem, Ill., Sept. 26.—(By the Associated Press.)—Mrs. Elsie Sweetin in jail here tonight partook of the first solid food since her arrest and confession last Tuesday that she administered poison to her husband and the instigation of Lawrence M. Hight, former Methodist Episcopal minister. She ate sparingly of the meal brought her this evening by Sheriff Vogt. Her meal consisted of meat, potatoes and beans. Since her arrest, she had had only a glass and a half of milk, though the sheriff had constantly urged her to eat some solid food.

The morale of the prisoner was improved and her physical condition also showed outward signs of betterment. The monotony of loneliness in the dingy jail was relieved today when relatives called on her to arrange for her defense. Another incident occurred today to cheer up the prisoner. A large bouquet of flowers was sent her by a local woman.

"My life was as pure as those flowers," she told the sheriff. "Oh, I wish I had never met that man Hight." The happiest moment of her confinement is yet to come. Mrs. Sweetin remarked to the sheriff today, when she learned her three boys are to visit her Sunday.

work was out will be successful because of the politicians as just as the American people," he continued. "Europe for five years had listened to those carrying-carrying buzzards, those international political demagogues, America's problems. Mr. Dawes told his audience in the armory here, could be solved through the same process or through the exercise of common sense."

"We have had an orgy of demagogism in the United States in the past few years," he went on. "We have had men running for office who thought more of votes than principles."

He contrasted this plan and doctrine with that which he said was being preached by Senator La Follette, the independent candidate for president. From this point he launched into an attack on the La Follette candidacy, which he asserted had created "the dominant issue of this campaign by its attack on the constitution of the United States."

The republican nominee set forth what he declared were various promises made by Senator La Follette and added that there was a strange coincidence in how Mr. La Follette expects to put into effect these improvements.

LULL CONTINUES IN CHINESE WAR

Shanghai, September 27.—(By the Associated Press.)—While the three-day lull in China's civil war merged into the fourth, unceasing preparations were continued for resumption of hostilities. Fighting fronts around Shanghai all were quiet early this morning.

Ho Feng Lin, military commissioner of Shanghai, visited Nanshiang field supply base last night to assure himself that the city's defenses were as perfect as they could be made.

More artillery was moved to the fighting fronts last night, and this morning 2,000 soldiers were sent to Nanshiang that they might relieve the beleaguered defenders in the first line.

Reports from Kashiung, 72 miles to the southwest by rail, said that forces under Sun Chua-Fang, military governor of Fukien province and Chen Tiao-Yuan, commanding the fifth mixed brigade of Kiangsu province troops, were gathering apparently in the vicinity of Kashiung, which is only 28 miles from Shanghai.

SEVERAL SPIES SHOT BY SHANGHAI OFFICIALS.
London, September 26.—A number of spies, including several women, were shot at dawn Friday by authorities in Shanghai, according to the Shanghai correspondent of the Daily Express.

Those executed had been found near the arsenal in Shanghai, according to the correspondent.

Dispatches from the far east report that General Sun Fang, one of Chi Hsieh Yuan's leaders, has brought up his army on the Shanghai front and that Sun and Chi both are speeding up their attack in the hope of being the first to enter Shanghai.

Doctors Decide To Place Taggart Under the Knife
Boston, September 26.—Decision to operate upon former Senator Thomas Taggart, of Indiana, for appendicitis, was announced at the Massachusetts General hospital today. The patient's condition was said to be satisfactory, with the operation decided on because of continuing symptoms.

The operation will be performed tomorrow. Mr. Taggart is here attending physicians had said up to this afternoon it was hoped to avoid an operation but when it was learned other members of the family had been sent for, the following bulletin was given out:

"Senator Taggart's condition during the past 24 hours remains satisfactory. He is not suffering any pain, and he had a good night. With temperature and local signs persisting and the patient's condition being favorable, an operation will be performed in the near future."

Mr. Taggart came here from his Cape Cod summer home. He is in his 60th year.

SHABBY STABLEBOY PROVES TO BE GIRL WHO HAD RUN AWAY
Akron, O., September 26.—A shabby youth, who told police officers here and there in Ohio and West Virginia when they happened to pick him up that he was a race-track stable boy, has been identified as the 17-year-old runaway daughter of J. C. Cline, a wealthy resident of Grafton, W. Va.

Confronted with positive identification, the "shabby youth" admitted that she was Mildred Cline. Mildred's impersonation of a tough young man was so good that the police who questioned her before she came here did not suspect the deception. The pseudo-stableboy burst into unmanly tears when she admitted her identity and pleaded that the news of her escape be kept from her mother.

Mildred disappeared Labor day, and since then radio and printed descriptions of her have been broadcast all over the east. Why she left her luxurious home in Grafton, Md., refused to say.

BANDITS WRECK TRAIN; 25 DYING 43 ARE INJURED
Odessa, September 26.—(By the Associated Press.)—Fifteen persons were killed, 25 mortally injured and 43 seriously hurt today when the Moscow-Odessa express was derailed by bandits about 300 miles from Moscow. Five women were among the 15 killed.

The bandits disconnected the rails, causing the locomotives and 10 coaches and baggage cars to jump the track. With the exception of the three last coaches, the entire train, which was traveling at high speed, was completely wrecked, the engineer, fireman and conductors being instantly killed. The rails were torn up for a distance of nearly 1,000 feet. The injured were rushed to Moscow by a special train which had hastened to the scene. The bandits escaped.

The second within less than a month on the line from Moscow to Odessa, caused by the wanton destruction of the track, 40 passengers having been killed in an exactly similar disaster about 200 miles from Odessa August 28.

FIERY CROSSES CHILL FERVOR OF SPOONERS
Jackson, Miss., September 26.—Those couples who pile themselves into automobiles at night, wend their way out on the numerous highways from the city, pick out quiet spots on the roadside and park, had something to think about today. Fiery crosses were placed on every highway out of the city last night along with one on the grounds of the old and new state capitals as a protest against the "fiery version."

One member of the Ku Klux Klan said the numbers of several parked cars were taken and in the future the parkers would be watched, numbers of cars obtained, together with the names of the occupants, and they would be turned over to the authorities for action.

MISSISSIPPI BARS REPUBLICAN NAMES
Jackson, Miss., September 26.—Republican candidates for congress can have no place on the official ballot in Mississippi, according to an opinion issued today by Francis Harmon, special assistant attorney general.

The ruling, which affects all the congressional candidates, related to the case of Dr. Edward W. O'Neal, who had announced his candidacy for congress from the third district. He was nominated at a republican convention several weeks ago. The opinion held that the regularly prescribed method of selecting congressional candidates was through primary elections and that none was held. The decision does not affect the presidential electors nominated by the republicans in state convention.

Fair and Warmer Weather Forecast Today by Bureau

Fair and warmer is the encouraging weather forecast for Saturday, as promised Friday afternoon by C. F. Von Herrmann, in charge of the local office of the United States weather bureau.

The disagreeable rains and cold of the past two or three days, caused by a disturbance in the eastern gulf, are about over, said Mr. von Herrmann, and somewhat higher temperatures, with clear skies and sunshine, are now in order for a day or two.

The temperature, which did not go over 62 degrees Friday, will probably mount to 70 or 75 degrees today. Which ought to be good news for football fans.

Beaumont's Port Still Blockaded By Sunken Boat
Beaumont, Texas, September 26.—The Port of Beaumont is still blockaded by the wrecked Italian motorship Isone, which was sunk in the Sabine-Neches canal on September 16 by a fire from the U. S. battleship USS Texas.

Government engineers have been in charge for several days and at 4 o'clock this afternoon, when the crew "knocked off" for the day, the project was made to try and raise the vessel tomorrow.

The loss to the port of Beaumont and steamship owners has been more than a half million dollars. Eight steamers are bottled up and 30 or more are laying outside or have been diverted to other ports.

The government accepted the city of Beaumont's offer to finance the dredging of a channel around the sunken vessel and placed the arrangements in the hands of government engineers.

DUBLIN CONFIDENT OF $1,000,000 PLANT
Dublin, Ga., September 26.—(Special.)—No decision has been reached here yet regarding the possibility of locating a $1,000,000 pulp and naval stores plant. Little anxiety is felt, however, as it is considered almost a certainty that the citizens' committee, working with northern capitalists interested in the project, have reached an agreement.

The proposed plant will represent an initial expenditure of $1,000,000, will employ 1,400 workers and will have a monthly payroll of $30,000. The plant proposes to purchase stumps and after extracting the valuable ingredients, dispose of the wood and pulp in various forms.

An area of unstumped farm lands in Laurens county will furnish the plant for a period of 20 years, it is stated, after which stumps from nearby sections will be purchased and shipped to the plant.

BRYAN WILL CONFER ON ITINERARY TODAY
Lincoln, Neb., September 26.—Governor Bryan, democratic vice-presidential nominee, left here today for Chicago, where tomorrow he will confer with Lincoln Dixon, in charge of western democratic headquarters, and other party organizers, on the arrangement of future itineraries for the national candidates and others speaking in the interest of the democratic party.

While in Chicago, Governor Bryan will take up with coal dealers the question of furnishing his state its October supply, that for September having been exhausted.

DAVIS CHALLENGES SERVICE OF G. O. P.

Davis at Jager and Welch made his appeal as an American to Americans, declaring:

"This year I insist that no intelligent vote can be cast that does not run over the record of the last three and one-half years and say to those in power 'well done thou good and faithful servant,' or, if in conscience that cannot be said, then let us say 'turn them out and try a new deal.'"

Elaborate preparations were made for tonight's meeting, held in the "Billy" Sunday tabernacle. A special train of nine cars came from Norton, Va., a hundred miles away. On leaving here Mr. Davis will go to Washington and thence to Wilmington, Del., before returning to New York.

No Pussy-Footing.
A pledge that he "would not assume the tip-toe in international affairs for fear the senate might overhear 'him,' was given here by Mr. Davis tonight in the closing address of his two days' swing through southern West Virginia.

Reviewing the record of the republican party in the past three years and a half he gave special stress to foreign affairs.

For five years in the inevitable disturbance which followed the world war, Mr. Davis said, "Europe has been waiting, not for American money, not for American men, but only for an expressive word of American sympathy and the impartial counsel of American minds."

Declaring that when Charles G. Dawes and his fellow members of the committee went abroad "the administration said we would have nothing to do with them but now that they have come home with some prospect of success before them they tell us 'we knew it all the time.'"

The executive head of the government, Mr. Davis said, now states that he did not dare let the senate know anything about it, although a majority of the senators were of his own party.

ON A ROCKY ROAD.

The Chicago Tribune is republican

and intensely partisan. It does not fail, however, to criticize its party management, if it feels that it is deserved, nor does it fail to haul up a flag of warning if it seems danger.

Arthur Henning, The Tribune's

Washington correspondent, is an orthodox professional. He does not color his comments to serve political interests, nor does he fall into the discredited class of newspaper

propagandists.

Understanding these facts, the following editorial reference to Mr.

Henning's western investigations,

published in a late issue of The Tribune, is extremely significant:

"Arthur Sears Henning says that the west is disaffected. The normal republicanism of Iowa and Indiana

and Minnesota, he says, is badly shot up. Wisconsin, North Dakota and perhaps South Dakota are already in Bob's vest pocket. And other states may follow. It means, says Mr. Henning, and he usually is right, that two states lost to Coolidge out of the group of three, comprising Iowa, Indiana and Minnesota, will throw the election into congress, and that, to put it simply, would be bad news for Mr.

Coolidge. There are several pertinent indications, in fact, that the west is disaffected, and that it is time for the trans-Allegheny management of the republican party to notice it."

This would indicate that The Tribune, located as it is at the gateway of the west, is not at all satisfied with the political situation from the Mississippi valley to the Pacific coast, from a Coolidge standpoint, and is frank enough to say so. And what Mr. Henning has found others are finding—that is, that disaffection

among the republicans in the west

is a serious menace to republican hopes.

In the following paragraph The Tribune takes a dig at Chairman

Butler that is also a significant indication of a growing sentiment:

"It might be better for the republican party and for things in general if it noted these facts now. Some westernism injected into its managerial personnel and into its policy may save a good deal of shocked surprise and sorrow later in the year.

A constructive program with a western slant may be the difference between Plymouth, Vt., and Washington, D. C., for Mr. Coolidge."

Even Colonel George Harvey,

whose position as chief strategist for President Coolidge has made him

more gun-shy than he ever was

when he was a free-lance during the early days of the Wilson administration, has sounded a warning

or two along the same lines in The Washington Post, and the republican chairman has not escaped his criticism.

All of which emphasizes what The Constitution has repeatedly said, that the most outstanding phase of

will endanger the chances of the republican party to carry the country

as they have been confidently expecting.

There are even hints that some of the bigger operators will soon

get out of the market until after election, and it would not be surprising if there should come in the very near future considerable quiet profit-taking and liquidation by these operators.

Wall street has for the last two or three months been very confident, believing that the election of Coolidge was a certainty, but now

an undercurrent of uncertainty can plainly be felt.

In the final analysis Wall street is worried, and this worry is being expressed more and more. Things are not rolling along just as smoothly

as it would have them.

THE RIGHT DIRECTION.

The farmers of Morgan county,

who have long held a leading place

among the agriculturists of the state, are showing their foresight

and initiative by making a decided start towards soil building, and the inauguration of a constructive farming program.

The people of Morgan realize that their future prosperity is insepar-

ably linked with the soil, and they are willing to give to its care and upbuilding their highest efforts. Notwithstanding Morgan has long been a leading cotton county its farmers

realize that the road to future prosperity lie along the road of diversification and this fall will see the heavy introduction of leguminous soil builders.

The last issue of the Madisonian

says:

"Morgan is one of the few counties in Georgia that will buy a car load of vetch seed to be distributed in small quantities among its farmers.

This not only means an increased corn yield per acre next year but for many years and indefinitely. Not only increased corn yields per acre

but increased yields of other crops per acre. It is a great forward and far-reaching step towards richer soils,

better crops, more profitable farming

and better conditions in every way.

"Rich soils make a rich agricultural section and people of Morgan county are going to thrive and prosper just as her farming interests prosper and her farming interests will prosper in terms of the yield of her lands per acre.

"The purchase of a car of vetch simply shows the spirit of force and courage and determination with which the farmers of Morgan county are turning their faces toward a new day

in agriculture."

In this movement towards enriching its soil and increasing the production of corn and other food crops per acre the farmers of Morgan are setting the other farmers of the state an example they will do well to follow.

WORTHY HONORED.

Professor J. C. Harris, principal of the State School for the Deaf

at Cave Spring, has been signally honored. He has just received from the department of education of Georgia notification that he has been chosen as one of 100 teachers

who have rendered such "distinguished service in the educational field" that they are to be hono-

raed by a "life" certificate lithographer and signed by the governor. It will be interesting to know the personnel of the full list of those whose services have thus been recognized and rewarded.

Professor Harris is the oldest of the four notable Harris brothers, all of whom have become distinguished

in their different fields of service.

The boys were bereft of a father

while only children and to Professor J. C. Harris befell the responsibility of assuming the place of family head and provider. It was through his labors largely that the younger boys received university

educations, an opportunity denied to him by the circumstances. He succeeded in educating himself,

however, and in 1885 was awarded the master of arts honorary degree

by the University of Georgia. The same honorary degree was conferred at the same time upon William F. Crusselle, now of The Constitution.

The other of the Harris brothers are former adjutant general of the United States army, Major General

Peter S. Harris; the present senior

United States senator, William J.

Harris, and Major Hunter C. Harris,

of the United States army.

Professor Harris' son, a graduate of Georgia Tech, is president of the Exposition Cotton mills, of Atlanta, and president of the Georgia

Textile association. He is one of the leading textile engineers and administrators in the south.

The honor and recognition have been worthily bestowed upon this well-known educator, the oldest of

"the Harris boys."

Thin-Spread Patriotism.

Talking patriotism, Mr. Laurence

Journalist-World tells this one—

"A Laurence man asserted that patriotism begins at home. He offered the proposition that a man should be first municipally patriotic, then nationally patriotic, then internationally

patriotic. I have in mind one boy, said the speaker, who has reversed

this process. He thinks he should be internationally patriotic first. And then, if he has any time off from look-

PLAN TO INCREASE GRADY HIGH SIZE

The first step in a movement to secure another unit for the Henry Grady high school building was made Friday night when the Tech High Parent-Teacher's association voted to appoint a committee to take the project up with the Boy's High School association. Due to the more than 1,500 students who will be graduated from the junior high schools this year, it will be an absolute necessity to increase the facilities of the school, it was declared.

The student bodies of Tech High and Boy's High are being cared for in the Grady High school building proper and in eight "portable" buildings on the campus. The original plans for the Grady High school call for three units. At present only one has been constructed and it is the object of the association to have the second unit finished in time for the opening of the next school term.

Dr. Thornwell Jacobs, president of the Tech High association, was asked to appoint the committee at an early date.

Rheumatism

"Good-bye old crutch!"

THERE IS positively no longer any excuse for suffering the agonies of rheumatism! Especially in the autumn of your life, when the vital organs weaken, impurities multiply and linger in the muscles and joints, as never before. It is now, just now, when you cannot afford to guess. No day returns!

Here is a joyous fact which can mean to you a fond farewell forever to all the miseries, the tortures, the body-twisting pains that you have suffered from the demon of rheumatism. It is a fact that rheumatism means "blood poverty." It is a fact with the increase of red-cells in your blood, impurities are destroyed. It is a fact that S.S.S. will help Nature build these red-blood-cells! S.S.S. is one of the most powerful blood cleansers in existence. Woman Is Given State Prison Term In Liquor Case

Convicted as the aftermath of charges growing out of an alleged liquor episode, in which the defendant is said by officers to have attempted to deliver a gallon of moonshine to a "telephone customer," Mrs. Annie Johnson, widow, of 88 Kirkwood avenue, was sentenced by Judge Andy Calhoun in municipal court Friday to serve a sentence of eight months on the state prison farm at Milledgeville.

Sentence was passed after the woman waged a vigorous verbal battle in her defense. She declared that the evidence presented against her was false, and that she had never engaged in the liquor traffic.

Deputy Sheriff Whitley, Holland, Nelms and Morris appeared as witnesses for the prosecution, setting forth that they had arrested Mrs. Johnson while she was in the act of attempting to deliver a gallon of liquor, they said, following their overhearing a telephone call from a man requesting that the delivery be made. The officers charged that Mrs. Johnson stepped from an automobile with the illicit liquid under her arm shortly after the tell-tale telephone call.

Mrs. Johnson declared this to be conclusive evidence of her innocence, appealing to Judge Calhoun for an opinion on her claim that liquor was never ordered by telephone. Judge Calhoun expressed the opinion that law violators went to extremes at times.

NEGRO CHAUFFEUR ROBBED AND CUT BY TWO BANDITS

Frank Tolbert, negro chauffeur for Dr. George H. Noble, lost $20, besides having his clothes literally cut from his body, as the result of an encounter he had with two unidentified negro bandits in the yard in the rear of his employer's home, 980 Peachtree street, shortly before 7 o'clock Friday night.

Call Officers M. D. Cartright and M. B. Johnson, who made record run from police station, searched the surrounding territory for two men answering the meager description Tolbert was able to furnish of the robbers, but failed to find any trace of them.

Tolbert had just been paid off for his week's work, and had gone to the house located in the rear, to change clothes to leave for his home on McDaniel street. As he entered the door of the outhouse a voice commanded him not to turn on the light. Turning to see who spoke, a large overcoat was thrown over Tolbert's head and two men seized him. Struggling with his assailants, the trio toppled out the door and down an embankment, where Tolbert freed himself, but not until his pocketbook was taken and his clothes slashed to pieces. Tolbert was cut in two places on the arm.

Solution To Dark Death Mysteries Near, Sleuths Say

New York, September 26.—Detectives of the homicide squad declared today that solution of the murders of Dorothy Keenan and Louise Lawson, "Broadway butterflies," was near as a result of the arrest of John Feinstein as one of the four men who robbed the home of Miss Edith Bohe, modiste, two weeks ago. Miss Bohe and her companion, Robert Hague, an official of the Standard Oil company of New Jersey, were robbed of jewelry valued at $50,000.

Feinstein was held without bail for hearing October 2 on charges of robbery. The prisoner, known as an inmate of Broadway, was positively identified by Miss Bohe's negro maid as the assailant who knocked her over the head when the robbers entered the apartment.

In addition to the Keenan, Lawson and Bohe cases, the police believed they also would be able to clear up other robberies of similar nature in the past year or two.

Miss Keenan, an artist's model, was murdered in March, 1923. Her apartment in Fifty-seventh street was ransacked and near her body was found an empty chloroform bottle. Miss Lawson was strangled to death in her studio apartment in West Seventy-seventh street last February.

Harding's Home Again Bows Head Over Open Grave

Marion, Ohio, September 26.—(By the Associated Press.)—All Marion this afternoon suspended activities for the funeral of Dr. Charles Elmer Sawyer, personal physician to the late President Harding. It marked the second time within little more than a year that Marion paid tribute to a distinguished citizen, the previous occasion having been for President Harding.

Funeral services at White Oak farm, the Sawyer home, near here, and at the Marion cemetery, at which Dr. Jesse Swank, pastor of Epworth M. E. church, officiated, were of a simple but impressive nature.

Hundreds of persons from this community and nearby towns, as well as notables from Washington and other cities, were here paying their last tribute.

Mrs. Florence Kling Harding, who has been spending most of her time at the Sawyer home since the death of her husband, attended the funeral. Although grief-stricken at the death of one of her warmest friends, Mrs. Harding bore up well under the ordeal. Twenty-seven employees of Dr. Sawyer's hospital were among the mourners, only three being left to care for patients.

Burial was in the Sawyer plot in the Marion cemetery, not far from where the body of President Harding lies entombed.

YOUTH CONFESSES WRECKING FLYER TO WITNESS CRASH

Rock Island, Ill., September 26.—William Chatterton, aged 15, under arrest here, confessed to the wrecking of the Golden State limited on the Rock Island lines at Fairport, Iowa, last night, the police announced today. Two sleeping coaches were derailed and a number of passengers were injured. The boy said he removed bolts from a switch, adding that he "did it just to see the cars pile up."

Although the youth, who was arrested at the scene, said two other men were with him, no others were found.

LA FOLLETTE PLANS TO HIT WEST FIRST

Washington, September 26.—Senator La Follette has concluded it will be best for him to strike westward when he leaves here, probably late next week, on a month's stump tour in his independent campaign for the presidency, and to postpone an invasion of New England and eastern industrial centers until just before election.

The senator's itinerary was the subject again today of conferences between him and his advisers here.

Arrangements are being made to have Senator La Follette deliver an address in Chicago a week from tomorrow night, and to make his visit in that city the occasion for a demonstration on the part of his supporters. From that point he is expected to swing through the northwest to the coast, returning by a route which will take him into Colorado and several of the plains states.

Treasury Issues Warning

The treasury today took cognizance of reports from the Pacific coast that La Follette supporters were pasting campaign stickers on silver dollars. In a statement attention was called to "department circular No. 55, approved by Secretary of the Treasury William G. McAdoo under date of February 12, 1916," reading in part as follows: "No foreign or mutilated silver coin or coin to which paper or any other substance is attached or upon which any name or advertisement is stamped or impressed, will be received (for redemption)." The only comment of the treasury was that "this provision is still in effect."

A statement issued from La Follette campaign headquarters declared treasury department officials were "exceeding their authority and wasting their time in trying to prevent La Follette supporters from pasting campaign stickers on silver dollars." Officials know, the statement added, that no law has been violated and it is absurd to say that the coin may not be redeemed.

Another statement issued here today—by Matthew Woll, one of the members of the American Federation of Labor committee that is working for the success of the La Follette-Wheeler ticket—said that Coolidge and the Klan are running neck and neck as the spokesmen for God and the constitution.

Plane and Tugs Scouring Water For Missing Ship

Cleveland, September 26.—A hydro-airplane, tugs and beach patrols today were added in the search to find trace of the freighter Clifton, now believed to have foundered with her crew of twenty-eight officers and men in a gale on Lake Huron on Sunday night. However officials of the Progress Steamship company, Cleveland, owners, were unable to understand why, if the Clifton did founder, no wreckage or other evidences of the tragedy had been found.

In an effort to find traces of the steamer arrangements were being made to send a hydro-airplane over Lake Huron. Two tugs were engaged to search along the Canadian shore of Lake Huron and men were to be sent along the Michigan shore to search for bodies or wreckage.

The Clifton cleared Sturgeon Bay, Wis., for Detroit Saturday with 3,000 tons of stone. She was last seen Sunday passing through the Straits of Mackinac.

COULDN'T RESIST SUICIDE IMPULSE; FUNERAL PLANNED

ment of justice, resigned today to become president of the Tri-State Transportation and Insurance company of New Orleans. He will be succeeded by Howard R. Volmer, of Washington. Colonel Shanton came here two months ago in connection with a shake-up in the bureau.

PENN STATE MEN ORGANIZE

When the Penn State grid squad journeys to Atlanta for a little get-together on October 15 with Tech's representatives, the powerful eastern eleven will not be without supporters, according to an announcement made yesterday from the Penn State alumni headquarters here. Efforts are being made to get the Atlanta graduates and former students in line to give the visiting athletes plenty of moral support, entertainment and a real Dixie welcome.

Plans are being made to get the alumni of Penn State in line, and all not already registered for the October 15 occasion have been requested to get in touch with H. C. Seip, whose office is in the Palmer building.

Tickets for the Penn State-Tech games are finding many takers and the committee of the Penn alumni stated yesterday that all the alumni of the eastern college can get seats by calling Seip at Ivy 3196 immediately.

GRIFFIN WINS OPENER, 20-0

Griffin, Ga., September 26.—(Special.)—Griffin High opened the football season here this afternoon with a 20 to 0 victory over the Barnesville Aggies.

Homer Key, diminutive halfback on the local eleven, was the outstanding star of the afternoon, displaying wonderful ability as a broken field runner, despite the fact that the game was played on a slippery field. At one time he dodged the entire opposing defense for a 67-yard run to a touch-down.

Griffin scored two tallies in the first quarter and one in the last. Key, Bunn and Smith were the boys who carried the ball over, while Key added a couple of points after touchdown by drop-kicking.

Matt, quarterback, was by far the best man for the visitors. In fact, he and Hawkins supplied practically all the drives the Aggies presented.

The locals play Gordon Institute here next Friday. Coach Tullaferris has rounded out a smooth-running little machine from the green material on hand, and the team bids fair to make a good showing this fall.

GA. BULLDOGS OPEN TODAY WITH BEARS

BY MARCUS BRYANT.

Athens, Ga., September 26.—(Special.)—Football, with all its glory, blazes down upon Athens tomorrow afternoon on Sanford field, when the Georgia Bulldogs and the Mercer Bears appear in the curtain raiser of the season.

Friday saw the Bulldogs in their snappy signal drills. Three full eleven were charging down the field during the afternoon and showed real vigor. Coach Woodruff also had several of his candidates practicing the kickoff.

New uniforms were issued in the Red and Black camp Friday afternoon. Game fashion has created no new vogue in the way of grid togs for the Bulldogs, with the exception of new-style pants. Jerseys and stockings will again be red. Candidates receiving uniforms numbered around thirty.

Following is the probable line-up of the two teams:

Georgia—Day, center; Joseph and Rogers, guards; Taylor and Carmichael, tackles; Thompson and Curran, Forbes or Howard, ends; Kilpatrick, quarter; Nelson and Welles or Kain, halfbacks; Butler or Thomason, fullback.

Mercer—Carson, center; captain Simmons and McDonald, tackles; Lancaster and Dunn, guards; Smith and Tipton, ends; Lawrence, quarter; Parks and Cecil, halfbacks; Rice, Ellison or Stein, fullback.

Captain John Fletcher is the only Bulldog who will be out of the combat today, the remainder of the grid-dogs being in good condition.

Officials for the game include the following: Springer, of Dartmouth, referee; Stewart, of Dartmouth, umpire; Streif, of Auburn, headlines man.

Miss Dot Stephens hasn't any legs, as a result of a railroad accident, but she is playing the starring part and dancing in a current London stage production.

STRIB TO MEET JACK DELANEY

New York, September 26.—"Pat" Striblinz has mapped out another ambitious campaign for Young Striz, young Georgia light-heavyweight, during the next few weeks. He has signed for his son to box Jack Delaney, a six-round match at Madison Square Garden, on November 7, it was announced today and has several other matches booked or pending before then. Tomorrow night the Georgian is slated to meet Vic McLaughlin, at Raleigh, N. C.

Striblinz's defeat at the hands of Ad Stone at Newark, N. J., Wednesday, has been laid by critics to the detrimental effect of his steady campaigning, which they said has sapped his strength. "Pat" Striblinz, however, insists his boy thrives on activity.

EPINARD STARTS AGAIN TODAY

New York, September 26.—Epineard, Pierre Vertheimer's famous French 4-year-old, will face a rival American thoroughbred tomorrow at Aqueduct track in the second of the series of international specials for which the foreign horse was brought to this country.

Beaten by a narrow margin by Wise Counselor in the first race on Labor day, Epineard, improving steadily in training, will go to the ring with an excellent prospect of victory, critics believe. The invader is expected to share popular support with Ladkin.

Major August Belmont's 3-year-old, which has flashed sensational speed within the past week.

The Ranocosa stable's Zev and Admiral Carey T. Grayson's My Own, rivals for 3-year-old honors last season, will seek to regain some of their former glory, and Wise Counselor will bid for a second straight triumph. Little Chief and Rialto, the remaining scheduled starters, are not rated so dangerous by expert.

Tomorrow's race, which has an added value of $25,000, is over a mile course and this distance is looked upon as especially favorable to Epineard.

The last gallop of the seven candidates today showed them in excellent condition. Epineard breezed a half-mile in :48.25 and Zev went three furlongs in :34.35. Ladkin was held for three furlongs in :35.35 and Wise Counselor, also under a strong pull, covered the same distance a second slower.

The horses are scheduled to go to the post about 3:50 p. m., eastern daylight time.

ley, halves, and Little Red Barron, fullback. It has the speed and carries some real passing ability.

The Petrels probably will start with the following line-up:

Clay Parrish, center; Corless and Hardin, guards; Justus and Cooper, tackles; Carroll and Nix, ends; Campbell, quarterback; Captain Adrian Maurer and Smith, halfbacks, and Boswell or Kilgore, fullback.

The condition of the field will govern largely whether Boswell or Kilgore starts at full. On a fairly dry field, Boswell probably will be the pick of the brothers Robertson. With a soggy field, as Grant field probably will be today, Kilgore will take the fullback job.

Wet Field Good For Tech.

A wet field will help Tech today, for Tech's power is in its driving attack, where the Petrels will depend largely on flashy backfield work to make big gains.

The Robertsons will throw in a number of reserves, if possible, it was indicated last night. Hambrick will take up the pivot position if Parrish's leg, damaged last year, goes bad. Crowe may get a chance at tackle.

Two of the backfield men who probably will appear in today's battle on the Petrel side are Redfern, halfback, and Sheppard, fullback.

LEGLESS ACTRESS STARS AS DANCER

Miss Dot Stephens hasn't any legs, as a result of a railroad accident, but she is playing the starring part and dancing in a current London stage production.

ROCKMART LOSES TO CARROLLTON

Carrollton, Ga., September 26.—(Special.)—Carrollton High defeated Rockmart today, 33 to 0, gaining at will even with a full team of substitutes. Harvey Stipes was the outstanding defensive star for Carrollton and Lester Reeves was the principal ground gainer. Clayland and S. Stipes also featured with long gains. Rockmart put up a scrappy game but was out-weighted and out-played. Carrollton's next game is with Newnan High in Carrollton next Friday.

BRAZILIAN REBELS START NEW STATE

Buenos Aires, September 26.—The Brazilian revolution, which was believed to have been effectually smothered, has been revived in the state of Parana, where rebel generals and an unknown number of followers have declared an independent state within they have named Brasiliandia.

According to a rebel manifesto, the new state includes the southern part of the state of Matto Grosso and a part of Parana. The manifesto is signed by Generals Diaz Lopez and Juan Francisco and Colonels Bernardo Padilha, Olympio Mesquita and Miguel Costa, all prominent leaders in the uprising in Sao Paulo.

The people in the "occupied" territory have welcomed the rebels and while the situation presents no serious menace to the Rio de Janeiro government, indications are that it will take some time to suppress the revolt, as the rebels have already scored at least one decisive victory over Parana government troops, who retreated to the southward.

DUBLIN CLEARS STAGE FOR CITY ELECTION

Dublin, Ga., September 26.—(Special.)—Local interest is now centered upon the municipal election to be held here October 15 at which three councilmen will be elected.

The terms of R. L. Rountree, Trammel Keen and J. F. Mullis will expire at this time. Mr. Rountree has offered for reelection and U. T. Joiner has announced for one of the other places. To date these are the only entries that have been made, but it is believed that several will enter the race.

—The— Rules of Golf BY INNIS BROWN.

The question of just who has the say about having a ball on the putting green in a three-ball or four-ball match lifted, where it lies in a position to help or hinder another player in making his stroke is quite a common one. It is rather generally known that if a ball of either side interferes with the player who is to play the next stroke, that player can have the ball either lifted or played at its owner's option. But the case where such a ball may help this player sometimes excites debate.

The rule is that any player in the match may have a ball either lifted or played at its owner's option, if he thinks it will either hinder a player of his side or help the opposing side's player. So that it is immaterial whether the request to lift comes from the player about to play a stroke, or another of the match.

If any golf rules puzzle you, write Innis Brown, care of The Constitution, enclosing stamped, self-addressed envelope. He'll clear them for you.

FOR A BETTER SCORE.

Even casual observation of players who have but lately taken up the game—and it frequently applies to those well beyond the beginners' stage—will reveal the fact that in iron play, a large percentage appear to play in dread of allowing the club to cut the turf after striking the ball.

In other words, they deliberately try to pick the ball up cleanly. This may be well and good in a few cases, but in general, the method of striking the ball with an iron ought to be such as to mean that the club will most surely cut the turf immediately upon and in front of where the ball lay.

In other words, swing to make the club-head continue through low after the ball and do not aim at making it dip down, catch the ball cleanly and then immediately begin to rise again.

FORT HAS TWO GAMES SUNDAY

There will be two games of baseball Sunday afternoon at Fort McPherson in the closing of the Sunday schedule for the season. The Commodore Feds and the 22nd Infantry teams will meet at 1:30 o'clock in the first game of the double bill, while the Commodore Feds and the Atlanta Paper company will close the baseball season in Atlanta for 1924, at 3:30 o'clock.

Both the Feds and Atlanta Paper team have proved favorites with Atlanta's Sunday fans. The Soldier team returning from summer camp early in September, had won the ball and won the majority of its games.

TO PROSECUTE REMUS UPON PRISON RELEASE

Washington, September 26.—Department of justice officials announced today they intended to hold five indictments now pending against George Remus, Ohio bootlegger, who recently repudiated his testimony before the Daugherty committee, and to try them when he completes his two-year prison sentence in the Atlanta federal penitentiary.

Indictments against Remus are pending in St. Louis, southern Indiana and Cincinnati, but the department has authorized the United States attorney at Columbus to dismiss two counts of an indictment on which he was tried and convicted.

The dismissal of the two Cincinnati counts was authorized, according to officials, because they were part of the original indictment upon which Remus was convicted and from which he received the maximum penalty under the law for violation of the prohibition act and for conspiracy. The department, it was added, did not think it necessary to go over the same ground there again.

Charges in the two indictments in Cincinnati, the one in southern Indiana and the two in St. Louis were said by Attorney General Stone to bring out fresh evidence and in event of other trials there would be no question of the government's right to prosecute.

Finding of Ancient Tunnel Revives Tale of Love Trysts

Washington, September 26.—The capital must have its little mysteries, and, lacking the sensations of an investigation by congress, has revived in this dull season an old favorite of other days, embodied in a series of tunnels, possibly abandoned sewers, which wind around underground in the most fashionable section of the city.

Rediscovered when a wayward truck crashed through its upper walls after 10 years of silence, the subterranean passage is again glorified by as many fanciful tales as were woven by the elder Dumas about the cavern where the Count of Monte Cristo held court.

The passage winds for blocks. There are mysterious doors, swinging on rusty hinges whose creak resounds through the eerie silence. German spies, clandestine lovers and a rich father who built an underground playhouse for his son, are credited in fire-side tales of the neighborhood with building the tunnel.

Stirred Thirst For Mysterious.

The cavern probably would have been left to its fate again, after being rediscovered, if someone hadn't barred up the passages during the night. The curious crowd which began to explore it Friday found their way blocked. Immediately there was mystery, and the old tales began to circulate.

No one seemed to know who had stopped up the cavern during the night, but it furnished the necessary thrill. The hole opened up by the truck, whereby the tunnel was once more bared to the public gaze, is in the backyard of a modern apartment house. Beyond the narrow entry here, there is a corridor about two yards wide and eight feet high, with a floor of plain earth, but with sides and arched roof of expensive glazed brick. The passage here leads for about 20 feet, where it was mysteriously blocked. Passages leading in other directions are also blocked. One leads down by a flight of steps to an aperture where there is an iron ladder. Formerly, it is said, there was a trapdoor over this opening, but it has disappeared. Beyond the bottom of the latter, the tunnel is blocked again.

Story of Illicit Trysts.

One passage still open leads to a neighboring backyard, through a stone wall, which is hollowed out. According to the stories of men who used to explore the tunnels as boys 10 and 15 years ago, the passage ramifies to Rock Creek park, quite a distance away. This has given credence to the theory that part of the tunnel is an old sewer.

Regarding the passage that leads next door by a devious route, there is a story that two brothers occupied the adjoining houses here. One was a bachelor, the other the husband of a beautiful young woman. The passage, according to this legend, was built by the bachelor, and he and the young woman would keep love trysts there, and through it visit each other. There is even a story that they would go together through the passage to Rock Creek park, and there sit together on the beautiful fern-clad banks. The husband, it is

MAN WAS 'PINCHED' AND NOT KIDNAPED, BROTHER IS TOLD

Chicago, September 26.—When four men leaped out of an automobile, grabbed Rudolph Mitchell, contractor, and sped away with him, his brother John telephoned the police that he had been kidnapped.

"Don't worry about him," a police sergeant said. "He ain't kidnaped. He's just pinched. We want him on a robbery charge."

related, died without discovering their secret.

Tale of German Spy.

Another tale is that an old German chemist once occupied a house in the neighborhood, and that German spies came to his home through the tunnel. The wall of one of the tunnels is plastered with German newspapers.

Pat O'Brien, headquarters detective, says the German spy story is a myth. According to his version, the tunnel was built more than 15 years ago by a wealthy man as a playroom for his son.

Another tale tells of a man entering the tunnel some years ago, and never returning. The theory at the time was that he had fallen into a pit of live, left as a trap, and the acid had consumed his body.

And along comes a very prosaic real estate man, who has been here for years, to explode all the fanciful theories with the statement that the tunnel was built just after the Civil war, when a great deal of grading and filling was being done, to drain off the water from the lowlands, and make it habitable.

The Luxury of Love

BY VIOLET DARE

XXXVI—A CRUEL FAREWELL. "I'd like to help you," Mary told Wilma. "But I don't see how I can. Nigel and I have been frank and truthful with each other; there has never been any pretense of love between us. He asked me to remain with him for six months, saying that he would free me at the end of that time. It is almost up now, and he is willing to let me go at once. How that concerns you—"

"Oh, I might have known that you wouldn't help me," exclaimed Wilma, rising so hastily that her chair tipped over. "You're going to be dreadfully sorry for this, but I'm sure I could help you."

She stormed out of the room, still crying. Mary looked at her helplessly. She was disgusted with Wilma and Raymond and Nigel, disgusted with their lives and with her own. With all her heart she longed to be one of those who lead lives of simplicity and beauty. It seemed to her that she had always dealt in half-measures; had never been true to herself. Always she had been doing things for other people and hoping that they would do something for her in return. And she had never gained anything by so doing.

She finished her packing, feeling as if a ghost were looking over her shoulder. She was leaving behind her everything that Nigel had given her, and taking only the things she had bought when she left New York to join him in England. The dressing table was covered with exquisitely carved pieces of French perfume, chains of beads, bracelets, rings, fans, scarves, embroidered gloves—doublets Wilma would make haste to claim them if the maids had not already made way with them before she got there, reflected Mary. She had packed the clothes that she was leaving behind her, and would tell Nigel where they were.

She was glad to leave this life with its luxury, its wanton spending of money on things that brought no happiness—she did not feel that it was all behind her. Always she had made sacrifices to false gods, to the gods of wealth and leisure, until when it was too late she had discovered that love, the only thing that could make life worth living, could not be bought with money. And now there would be no more of this. She laughed softly as she looked back at the things she would be free. In a short time she and Bruce could be married and go to the lonely corner of the world where he was working to make a name for himself. To be alone with him was all that she asked.

Nigel, she supposed, was making all plans for departing at once for Mexico City. When she joined him in the living room after finishing her packing he corrected this impression. "I can't leave at once—oh, I'll be a matter of only a few days at best," he assured her. "But there are matters here; things I've gone into with Raymond, that take time. I've bought the ranch, and he wants to check up on equipment and horses and all that sort of thing."

"But Nigel," Mary began, and then stopped. After all, she had no right to interfere with his affairs. It seemed to be that he was acting foolishly, but he resented any interference from her so bitterly that she decided to say nothing more. "Leaving today?" he asked nonchalantly, as Wilma sauntered into the room.

"Yes, I'm going immediately after luncheon, in order to make connections with the train for Vancouver."

BEAUTY CHATS

BY EDNA K. FORBES.

TOILET VINEGARS.

Toilet vinegars are very easy to make at home, and surprisingly expensive to buy. Do you want to try? If you have an atomizer, fill it with perfumed vinegar and after you have washed and dried your face, spray it with this refreshing lotion. Or spray all over after a bath. Toilet vinegar keeps the skin white, and by closing and shrinking the pores, makes it fine grained, helps cure blackheads and prevents new ones forming. It also cures a greasy skin and tones up relaxed muscles.

Now you can use either white wine vinegar, which any good grocer sells, or a solution of acetic acid. But I always advise the vinegar, preferring something made up in nature's laboratory to man's. The simple formula for any flower vinegar is:

Extract of (any favorite flower) . . . 3-12 ounces
White wine vinegar . . . 1 pint
Easy enough, isn't it? For orange flower vinegar, buy extract of neroli petals, for violet, extract of cascades, and to make it still nicer in smell, 1-3-4 ounces of extract of neroli bigarade as well. Or, buy 20 drops of the essential flower oils—oil of violet, oil of rose, oil of lavender, and so forth, and add to the pint of vinegar. Lavender is particularly refreshing, as it suggests sunny gardens, and the smooth, white, sweet scented sheets that came from grandmother's linen cupboard.

Perhaps you would like to use fresh flowers. Four ounces of petals from any favorite flower, or of bruised myrtle leaves, added to a pint of vinegar, are set aside to digest for a week, then poured through a muslin bag and squeezed as dry as possible. To make this, or any other vinegar, still more astringent, 10 grammes of tincture of benzoin can be added.

Mrs. S. T. H.—For excessive perspiration under arms, use the following lotion: Epsom salts, 3 ounces; wheat bran, one-half of a pint; water, four pints. Mix this and let stand over night. Strain and add four ounces of bay rum. This lotion will not absolutely stop perspiration, as a certain amount of it is healthy and desirable, but it controls the excessive amount of it, and also neutralizes odor. It can be used as often as needed without any harmful effect.

A Reader—Before going out into the direct rays of the sun use a very little bit of cream on your face and dust it well with powder. This will prevent a certain amount of tanning and freckles.

M. J. R.—The only thing that a little girl can do to control her weight is to keep from eating more than she needs, especially between meals. Candy, ice cream, rich pastries are all very fattening, so do not eat too much of these things.

All inquiries addressed to Miss Forbes in care of the "Beauty Chats" department will be answered in these columns in their turn. This requires considerable time, however, owing to the great number received. So if a personal or quicker reply is desired, a stamped and self-addressed envelope must be inclosed with the question.—The Editor.

Peach Stains.

At this time it might be well to remind the housewife that a little pure glycerine will remove peach stains from the table linen. Apply before sending to the laundry and it will come back beautifully white.

A Good Sign.

Flecks of white fat showing through the fibre of raw meat mean the meat will have more flavor and be more tender than if without them.

Only on the train did peace come.

Mary replied, "I'll take the boat from there to Victoria, and then go by train to Seattle."

"Where you're to meet the man of your heart, I suppose," commented Wilma maliciously. "Wonderful to be in love, isn't it? The last three times I've been rather bored after the first month or so, but of course if you go to some interesting place—Paris or Monte Carlo or San Francisco or somewhere like that, it's likely to last longer."

"Oh, Mary's going in for love in a cottage—or rather, a mining camp," remarked Nigel. "Cave man stuff and all that, you know."

"Not really! Imagine Lady Mary Cavendish, the famous beauty, in a shack in a mining town! Think of the stories the Sunday supplements will run! My dear, this is too much!"

"That reminds me; I'm leaving my jewels in the purple leather case; here is the key." Mary noted the avaricious gleam in Wilma's eyes as she spoke.

"I'm not taking anything," Wilma said. "Better take the emeralds at least; you may want to pawn them some day," laughed Nigel, making no move to pick up the little key. "Gillian will probably be glad of some extra change."

It had been hard enough to bear the taunts directed only at her; to have Bruce dragged in was too much. Mary rose, her beautiful face as white as her gloves.

"Oh, I've had enough; I can't stand any more!" she cried. "Don't think that I don't understand your cruelty. You're jealous of Bruce and me, you two. You're jealous because he and I have what you can never have, what you can't buy and can't steal—the luxury of true love. Even when the whole world separates us, we belong to each other. Even if we never saw each other again, our love would be as strong as it is now."

She ran from the room, feeling like a hunted creature. Only when she stood alone on the observation platform of the Vancouver train did peace come to her weary heart.

HOUSEHOLD SUGGESTIONS

A Coat of Varnish.

A thin coat of colorless varnish will add life to the straw matting, at the same time giving it a pleasing gloss.

Scuffed Shoes.

Don't tear off the leather where your shoe has been scuffed. With a little glue flatten the piece in place. When dry have a "shine" and the scuffed place will never show.

Home Decorating.

A small window can be given extra width and height by setting curtain rods beyond the casing on each side and at the top and using material for draperies heavy enough to cover the deception.

Mrs. Boone had many friends in Atlanta, her daughter being Mrs. Frank Leavell, for many years the secretary of the state B. Y. P. U. work.

SHRINERS' FASHION SHOW NEARS END

The last performance of Yarnab Temple's Fashion show has been running all week at the auditorium will be presented tonight at 7:30 o'clock.

Over $60,000 worth of gowns of all kinds are displayed in the tableaux participated in by a host of the prettiest girls in Atlanta, who were coached for their appearance by Miss Nellie Sullivan. At tonight's performance Miss Sullivan and her company will be seen in the "Dance of the Jewels" and the "Flapper Doll Dance." Martin Amorous will give an exhibition of draping the living models.

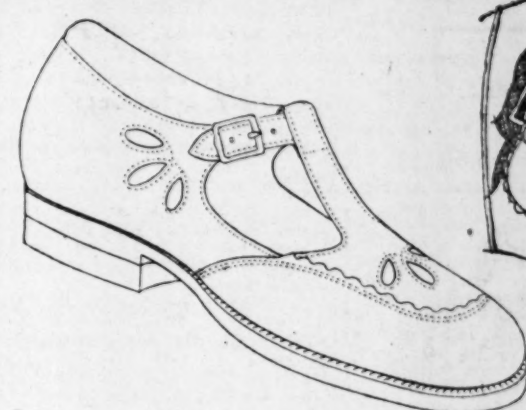

One of the interesting features tonight will be a pantomime presented by Yarnab's Oriental band, assisted by Miss Annie Mae Coleman and her company of dancers, depicting life on the desert. The play was arranged by a real oriental and is true to life, and as the Shrine is distinctly oriental the production will be a happy culmination to the successful venture of the order in presenting to the public a performance that mirrors the manners and customs of the far east with those of the west. Warner's Seven Aces will furnish music for the full performance and play for the dance that will begin immediately after the show is concluded.

Blake To Represent Business Men's Club At Commerce Parley

Russell Blake, president of the American Business club, at the club's luncheon Friday at the Peacock cafe, announced his appointment as a delegate to the Pan-American conference to be held here October 1-4, by Mayor Sims. He urged the members of the club to attend the conference meetings and aid in entertaining the delegates from North and South America. Sam Kokenberry, of the Community Chest campaign committee, delivered an address at the luncheon in which he asked the support of the club in the Community Chest campaign.

Musical entertainments by Mrs. M. A. Cox, pianist, and her daughter, Miss Annie Louise Talton, violinist; Misses Kathleen Watson and sister, vocalist and pianist, respectively, and Misses Hickey, Chapel and Mildred Arnold, singers and dancers, were other features of the luncheon. Among prominent visitors present were Colonel Claude C. Smith, co-ordinator-general of the Stone Mountain circuit, and Mr. Evans, assistant manager of the Victor Machine company of this city.

Board of Health Fund of $5,000 Is Held Illegal

According to an opinion handed down by Attorney General George M. Napier, the state board of health will have to forego a special appropriation of $5,000 for this year, made by the last session of the legislature. The loss of this money to the state health department is caused by an error in the wording of the bill, as it was transcribed and signed by the governor. The bill reads in one place that the annual appropriation of $5,000 is to begin with 1924, while in other places it reads 1925. Mr. Napier held that, when a measure was thus self-contradictory in its terms, it would be improper to make the appropriation for this year, though it could be made in 1925 and thereafter under the bill as passed. He pointed out that while the appropriation was small, and beyond question meritorious, it would be improper to depart from the letter of the law in this case, as it would set an erroneous precedent.

GEORGIA FUNERAL DIRECTORS' MEET ENDS ON FRIDAY

C. F. Calloway, of Chicago, Ill., reported to be one of the best-informed lecturers and demonstrators in the funeral-directing field, was the principal speaker Friday at the final meeting of the Georgia Funeral Directors' convention held at the Atlanta Casket company. The convention has been in session for the past two days, with 92 Georgia funeral directors in attendance. Mr. Calloway covered many interesting subjects, and gave instructive demonstrations, all of which tended to bring out advanced ideas. O. C. Tatner, also of Chicago, Ill., attended the meetings and displayed all the latest supplies used in the work.

Friday's program consisted of showing the visitors through the Atlanta Casket company's plant, one of the oldest and largest manufacturing concerns in the south, having a sales force of nine salesmen and employing 100 workers. Visitors also visited the Atlanta Metallic Casket company, the only factory in the south manufacturing metal caskets on a large scale. E. R. Paris is secretary-treasurer of the Atlanta Casket company and B. V. Brunley field secretary-treasurer of the Atlanta Metallic Casket company. These two men also delivered addresses at the convention, concerning the work that the two concerns are doing. Luncheons have been given in honor of the representatives of the various establishments of Georgia each day, and a theater party at the Forsyth Friday night brought to a close the successful convention.

Plans are being made to have the convention here again in 1925. The discussion on this matter was well received by the representatives and they expressed a desire to return.

RETAIL DRUGGIST BODY TO SELECT EMBLEM AT MEET

A schedule of interesting talks to be delivered throughout the winter will also be arranged. The motto of the organization is "Better service for the public."

The retail drug association is affiliated with the Atlanta Retail Merchants' association.

NEGRO HELD AS AIDE TO ESCAPED PRISONER

Charged with aiding Arthur Barfield to escape from the custody of an officer Thursday evening, and also with exceeding the speed limit and reckless driving of an automobile, Charlie Williams, negro, of 110 Terry street, Friday evening was jailed by Call Officers M. D. Cartright and M. B. Johnson and held in default of a $2,000 bond.

Besides Barfield, the police are searching for Hope New in connection with the escape. New, said to be a close friend to Barfield, was in the automobile with the negro that speeded Barfield away to safety, the officers charge.

Besides the original charge for which Barfield was being held in jail, failure to pay alimony to his wife, he will face two others when rearrested, officers state. The new offenses will be escaping, and assault and battery.

The latter charge grows out of the punishment he is said to have meted out to pretty Estelle Williams, who lives on Highland avenue, when she refused to leave Atlanta with him following his sensational get-away.

The petition, which was signed by James Goldsmith, J. J. Barnes, Sam Saltzman and Wilbur Gordon, stated that two persons residing in the eighth ward voted in the ninth ward Wednesday.

Following is Mr. James' statement: "I told friends of Mr. Cobb that if the executive committee asked me to appear before them and answer questions I would do so. I told them that I knew of one woman who lived in the eighth ward, but whose name was on the ninth ward registration list. Whether she voted in the ninth, or whether anyone else voted in the ninth who lived in the eighth, could not be sworn to by me, and I did not make an affidavit to this effect and would not do so. My name in the petition was used without my permission."

BEFORE BABIES WERE BORN

Mrs. Oswald Benefited by Taking Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound

Girardville, Pa.—"I took Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound because for my last two babies came. It keeps me in perfect health and I am on my feet getting meals and doing all my housework until an hour before the baby is born. A friend told me to take it and I have used ten bottles since I heard about it. I recommend the Vegetable Compound whenever I can. Just yesterday a friend was telling me how miserable she felt, and I said, 'If you start taking Lydia E. Pinkham's you will feel fine.' Now she is taking it."

Mishawaka, Indiana.—"I took Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound for weakness before my babies were born. I was weak and tired out all the time and it helped me. When I had inward inflammation the doctor treated me, but did not help me, so I tried Lydia E. Pinkham's Sanative Wash and it helped me at once."

CHEST HEADQUARTERS OPENS NEW OFFICES

Headquarters of the Community chest campaign for 1925 has been opened in rooms 1310-11-12-13, Candler building, it was announced Friday. Routine headquarters, for the collection of chest pledges and administration of the fund for 1924, will continue in rooms 1304-05 Candler building, Roy P. Gates, executive director, stated.

Plans are completed for the campaign. Mr. Gates said. The personnel is being recruited rapidly from among the most active civic workers in Atlanta.

"The annual meeting of the Community Chest corporation, next Tuesday evening in the Biltmore hotel, will mark the actual beginning of the campaign," Mr. Gates stated.

"Thereafter our activities will increase each day until we reach the intensive week of solicitation, November 5-12."

With the acceptance Friday by S. W. Walker, leader of the negro division of the campaign, the immediate organization of that phase of the work will proceed rapidly, it was stated.

DINKLER RETURNS FROM INSPECTION OF REDMONT HOTEL

Carling L. Dinkler, vice president and general manager of the Dinkler Hotel company, returned Friday from Birmingham where he went to inspect work on the new Redmont hotel, now in course of construction at Fifth avenue and Twenty-first street. The new hotel, which will have 250 rooms with bath when completed, is expected to be finished and ready for occupancy by April 1, 1925. It will embody the latest and most modern arts of hotel architecture and will cost approximately $1,500,000. Including the basement and lobby floors, the building will be 14 stories in height.

"Work on the new structure is progressing splendidly," declared Mr. Dinkler, "and the contractors assured me that it would be ready for occupancy about April 1, next. No expense will be spared to make the Redmont one of the foremost hotels in the south."

TWO PLEAD GUILTY TO STEALING AUTO; GET PRISON TERMS

Entering pleas of guilty to charges of having transported a stolen automobile into Georgia from Tennessee two Kentucky youths, Ollie P. Malone and E. L. Sanders, were sentenced Friday by Judge E. D. Thomas, of Fulton superior court, to serve sentences of from two to three years each in the chain gang. The pleas of guilty were entered and sentence passed within an hour after the indictments had been returned by the Fulton county grand jury.

The two youths reached Atlanta a few days ago in an automobile. They were arrested on suspicion that the automobile was stolen property. They later admitted that the car was stolen from Maysnord McGuire, of Nashville, Tenn. The young men were in the courthouse when the indictments were returned, and they immediately entered pleas of guilty before Judge Thomas.

COLORADO FOREST FIRES ARE PUT OUT

Colorado Springs, September 26.—Following a strenuous day's work on the part of scores of fire fighters in the Ute Pass region west of Colorado Springs, forestry officials reported all of the 28 fires which burned yesterday over a twenty-mile front had been extinguished or brought under control. The property damage was slight.

In a short statement, W. Garland Cooper, nominated to succeed himself as councilman from the tenth ward, thanked his supporters, and promised that he will strive to represent the ward in a manner to merit the confidence placed in him.

Recent Candidates, Victors and Losers, Thank Supporters

Several statements, expressing appreciation of support in the city primary Wednesday, were issued by both victorious and unsuccessful candidates Friday morning.

Councilman Harry York, of the sixth ward, who was reelected by a comfortable majority, stated:

"The old saying 'the people do not appreciate anything that they represent' does for them is certainly wrong this time, because I was not able to call on any of the people to ask them to vote for me, but was compelled to run on the record made during my present term."

"I am indeed grateful for their loyal recognition and will endeavor to serve all of the people without fear of special interests or political influence."

Thanks to friends and supporters also was expressed by Councilman Wiley L. Moore, of the seventh ward, who was elected to succeed himself in the following statement:

"I wish to express my sincere thanks and appreciation to the good citizens of the seventh ward for the support and victory that they gave me at the polls on Wednesday. I want them to know that I will put forth my best efforts, and will represent them at all times to the very best of my ability in trying to secure for the seventh ward the things it needs and the things it is entitled to."

"I would like to say to those who did not support me that I have no enemies to punish, and that I will try to serve each and every citizen in the ward alike. Their assistance and cooperation will be highly appreciated in assisting me in carrying out a constructive program for the citizens of the seventh ward."

F. B. Florence, elected tax collector to succeed Marvin P. Roane, who refused to stand for reelection, said:

"I wish to thank the good citizens of Atlanta for their wonderful support of me on Wednesday. I want them to know that I will endeavor to serve them at all times to the very best of my ability. I would like to say to those who did not support me that I have no enemies to punish, and that I will try to serve each and every citizen in the ward alike. Their assistance and cooperation will be highly appreciated in assisting me in carrying out a constructive program for the citizens of the seventh ward."

Why should they be anxious?

Last week in New York one of these fathers thought of the many others and himself when he saw a small automobile, apparently without a driver, threatening its way with an erring precision through the thronging traffic of Fifth avenue. Wondering crowds watched the little car obeying every signal of every traffic policeman, and darted between the multitudes of rushing buses, limousines, and touring cars, and stopped, and started ahead, as if guided by the most experienced of drivers. Yet no one was at the wheel of the car.

The steering power.

What was guiding it?

A power outside of the car.

A man's brain, by means of one of the many marvelous discoveries of our day and time, was steering the car as if he were in it. We had heard it said that methods of steering airplanes by wireless had been invented. We knew that it was possible to steer and drive boats from the shore in this way.

But seeing this little car, safely steered through New York's streets by one not in the car, made one realize the marvel of it.

Then came the thought—

What if man could guide our children's lives through school and college days, and on and out through the streets and cross ways of life, as surely as a man can guide a car through the streets and cross ways of New York, with its teeming millions, where a mistake of judgment meant a hopeless smash and wreck?

Is not that car, so safely guided, a picture of what the Father of us all is seeking to do with our lives? With one great exception—yes. The car will never be able to steer itself alone. It can never be other than a lifeless machine endowed with seeming life by the law of man.

Not machines—men.

But these lives of ours are no machines.

Our hearts and minds are the means by which the steering and driving power is received from God, if our hearts and minds are in tune with His love. But these hearts and minds of ours are living things which by receiving may be endowed with the very life of God.

Yonder motor-car, a mere piece of machinery, if it is in order, must receive the power, and run as the man, who made it, directs. But these hearts and minds of ours, these living things, which by receiving may be endowed with the very life of God, are not machines. They are living things, which by receiving may be endowed with the very life of God.

And here again is another mystery. If the steering gear and the machinery of the motor-car should get out of order in the traffic jam, the smooth road would come quickly, and the lifeless machine, as it went on wheels, would feel neither sorrow nor pain.

We may suffer.

But if the heart and mind, living things, are in tune with the power which comes from the love of God, our Father, the life may seemingly go on smoothly, and the heart and mind may not come for years, but it inevitably must. And when it does come to the life which has locked itself against God's appeal, the heart and mind will suggest the question—

"What of our own lives?"

What power and influence are going on in us, and from our homes, to these boys and girls, just starting on the threshold of life?

Is it the power and influence which we have received from God? Or, are our lives locked and barred against His power and influence, as our sin?

The thought is a solemn one. Our sin should be with all of us these autumn days, when our boys and girls are rushing off to school and college. It

School Officials Forget Hair Bobs In Bare-Knee War

Little Rock, September 26.—The bobbed-hair ban of former years on Little Rock school teachers has been modified but bare knees among senior high school pupils are forbidden, according to the new dress regulations announced by the superintendent of city schools and principals of the various schools.

The dress regulations are listed as follows:

1. No rouge or lipstick.
2. A simple arrangement of the hair recommended.
3. No French heels, satin or dress slippers.
4. No silk hose.
5. No bare knees among senior high school pupils.
6. Middie or plain waists worn with woolen or cotton skirts, or simple woolen, cotton or linen dresses.

Reasons for the regulations given are:

1. Health may be promoted.
2. Modesty inculcated.
3. Expense to parents reduced.
4. Scholarship rather than fashion emphasized.
5. A democratic spirit fostered, thus avoiding distinctions due to dress.

ASSAULT WITH AUTO, INDICTMENT CHARGES

Charged with "having assaulted and beaten with an automobile" a four-year-old child, L. F. Glenn, a railroad man, was indicted on two counts by the Fulton county grand jury Friday, the indictment resulting from charges that Glenn seriously injured Ethel Hanson, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. T. C. Hanson, of 172 Crumley street, on the afternoon of August 6.

The language of the indictment departed from the usual form followed in such cases and created considerable comment in courthouse circles.

On Going to School ONE WAY ONLY TO WISDOM

(The following is issued by the committee on church cooperation.)

This month, thousands of children went to school for the first time. Many more thousands, with vacations over, have returned to their classes in grammar and high school.

Other thousands have left home either for the first time to enter college, or for another year, to take up their studies again in lecture halls and recitation rooms of colleges and universities.

Back of the overwhelming majority of these boys and girls, all sons and daughters, are anxious mothers and fathers.

Why should they be anxious?

Last week in New York one of these fathers thought of the many others and himself when he saw a small automobile, apparently without a driver, threatening its way with an erring precision through the thronging traffic of Fifth avenue. Wondering crowds watched the little car obeying every signal of every traffic policeman, and darted between the multitudes of rushing buses, limousines, and touring cars, and stopped, and started ahead, as if guided by the most experienced of drivers. Yet no one was at the wheel of the car.

The steering power.

What was guiding it?

A power outside of the car.

A man's brain, by means of one of the many marvelous discoveries of our day and time, was steering the car as if he were in it. We had heard it said that methods of steering airplanes by wireless had been invented. We knew that it was possible to steer and drive boats from the shore in this way.

But seeing this little car, safely steered through New York's streets by one not in the car, made one realize the marvel of it.

Then came the thought—

What if man could guide our children's lives through school and college days, and on and out through the streets and cross ways of life, as surely as a man can guide a car through the streets and cross ways of New York, with its teeming millions, where a mistake of judgment meant a hopeless smash and wreck?

Quickly came another question—

Is not that car, so safely guided, a picture of what the Father of us all is seeking to do with our lives? With one great exception—yes. The car will never be able to steer itself alone. It can never be other than a lifeless machine endowed with seeming life by the law of man.

Not machines—men.

But these lives of ours are no machines.

Our hearts and minds are the means by which the steering and driving power is received from God, if our hearts and minds are in tune with His love. But these hearts and minds of ours are living things which by receiving may be endowed with the very life of God.

This is not only our glory. It is our duty.

Yonder motor-car, a mere piece of machinery, if it is in order, must receive the power, and run as the man, who made it, directs. But these hearts and minds of ours, these living things, which by receiving may be endowed with the very life of God, are not machines. They are living things, which by receiving may be endowed with the very life of God.

And here again is another mystery. If the steering gear and the machinery of the motor-car should get out of order in the traffic jam, the smooth road would come quickly, and the lifeless machine, as it went on wheels, would feel neither sorrow nor pain.

We may suffer.

But if the heart and mind, living things, are in tune with the power which comes from the love of God, our Father, the life may seemingly go on smoothly, and the heart and mind may not come for years, but it inevitably must. And when it does come to the life which has locked itself against God's appeal, the heart and mind will suggest the question—

"What of our own lives?"

What power and influence are going on in us, and from our homes, to these boys and girls, just starting on the threshold of life?

Is it the power and influence which we have received from God? Or, are our lives locked and barred against His power and influence, as our sin?

The thought is a solemn one. Our sin should be with all of us these autumn days, when our boys and girls are rushing off to school and college. It is a good time for us to review and examine, not the lives of others—but, not even the lives of the boys and girls at an hour when a good part of the world seems filled with a panicky fear about the young people—but our own individual lives.

Up to Parents.

If we, the older people—the fathers, mothers, relatives and friends of the younger folks—have our lives in tune with the life of our Father in heaven, whose very names are Life, Love and Light, so that throughout the 24 hours of the day our lives receive their going power, and guidance from Him, whom Christ revealed, we need have neither doubt nor fear—the children, whom we love, will be safe.

From the same source of infinite wisdom, they too, will receive power and guidance.

But God pity and help the children of those who have not this power and guidance in their lives.

What of yours and ours?

Conscience, prayer and our Bibles will enable us to answer.

In these opening days of school, it seems to us that God is saying again—"If any of you lack wisdom, let him ask of God, that giveth to all men liberally, and upbraideth not, and it shall be given him." P. A. Hooper, Jr., pastor of the First Baptist church.

Here is the source of driving and steering power.

Shall we not make it ours, and our children's?

Red Riding Hood

ELIZABETH JORDAN

SYNOPSIS.

Mrs. Morgan Schuyler, one of New York's leading philanthropic and social lights, is a young woman to work in her apartment mornings. The advertisement is answered by a girl evidently of birth and breeding. In spite of the fact that she admits a desire to hide her identity, Mrs. Schuyler accepts her on trust and signs her with the name of Hope Emerson.

Besides the lady herself, Mrs. Schuyler's family consists of her mother, Mrs. Van Dorn; a young brother, Jim Van Dorn, and an older brother, Bertie, who is away, but whose room is always kept ready for him. Sally Wallis, Mrs. Schuyler's god-daughter, calls during the course of the morning.

The second morning of her employment Hope faints after receiving a mysterious telephone call. Mrs. Schuyler summons Dr. Horace Osborne.

INSTALLMENT XII.

PURELY PROFESSIONAL INTEREST.

Back in the secretary's room Dr. Osborne found that young person sitting on the side of the day bed looking rather vaguely around her.

"Here," he said sharply, "this sort of thing won't do at all. I told you to lie still."

"I know, but I'm quite all right now, and I simply must get up."

The girl's voice, which he heard for the first time, interested him. Though no one suspected it, beautiful speaking voices were a passion with Osborne, and he collected them as new records for his memory phonograph. The voice of Miss Emerson was now added to the assortment, but he replied with abrupt authority in his own agreeable baritone:

"You're nothing of the kind. Lie down."

The head of his patient rose and she looked at him with resentful eyes. The young man—he was still in his early thirties—grinned unrepentantly.

"Lie down!"

"Not used to taking orders, are you?" he interpreted. "Well, you'll learn, with a little practice. Start now by lying down. I want to talk to you."

Hope lay down. It was easier to obey than to rebel, for her brain was still whirling.

"I can't tell you anything," she began.

"I suppose you can't, or rather you won't. However, Mrs. Schuyler has told me all she knows, which doesn't help us much. Of course, you understand that my interest is purely professional," he added in a tone to match the words. "What I ask you will have a definite bearing on your condition. Medical questions and answers rest between physician and patient, and no one else need know anything about them, so I want you to be frank. It's plain," he went on, as she did not speak, "that you're in an overwrought nervous state which isn't wholly due to this morning's experience. I want to learn the cause and help you. Will you let me?"

"If I can."

She lay facing him, with closed eyes, while through the dropped lids two big tears forced their way and ran slowly down her cheeks.

The doctor nodded.

"That's right," he said cheerfully. "Cry if you want to. It may do you good."

It appeared, however, that this was not the type of patient who found comfort in tears or confidences.

"It won't do me good. I hate myself when I cry!" she fiercely protested, and felt in the pocket of her uniform for a handkerchief. Finding none, she opened her eyes and tried to rise.

"Use this."

He put into her hand the big square of linen he had taken from his breast pocket and shaken out of its original folds, and she gratefully buried her face in it. Then she looked at him dry-eyed.

"Thank you. I suppose one can't help fainting once or twice in a lifetime; but at least I can keep from crying, and I will."

"Are you in the habit of fainting?"

"I certainly am not!" She repudiated the suggestion with heat. "I never fainted in my life till today."

"That's interesting," he studied her thoughtfully. "But, of course, I realize you're not the type to keel over without cause."

"I hope you'll tell Mrs. Schuyler that," the patient spoke in a tone of deep depression. "After this she'll expect me to flatten out on any pretext. It isn't an auspicious beginning to new work."

"I'll tell her. But don't worry about the new work just now. Rest and relax."

His voice was businesslike, and the expression of his vividly blue eyes cool and professional, yet there was about him a heartening suggestion of understanding strength. Osborne had ostentatiously refrained from cultivating the sympathetic bedside manner affected by so many of his colleagues, but its absence had not handicapped his career—though he had gone to the other extreme of assuming a brusqueness that on occasion could be brutal. Looking now into what Maud Schuyler called "Horace's fighting face," Hope felt her nerves relax. He saw the change.

"Feeling better, aren't you? Now I'll tell you what I want you to do. Take another dose of the bromide I'll mix for you—it will be a mild one—and then lie still till I come back. I'm lunching here. After luncheon I'll bring you some hot soup or milk, and then we'll have a talk. Is that a bargain?"

She nodded, and he prepared the dose and gave it to her.

"Now remember, you're to lie quiet. No roaming around the room," he said on the threshold as he was leaving. "Whatever frightened you is past. Nothing can hurt you here!"

He spoke with conviction, holding her eyes; and again he saw her respond to his words and manner. She brought out a hesitating request.

"Doctor, before you go, there's just one thing—"

"Yes?" He waited, his hand on the doorknob.

"I wonder if you and Mrs. Schuyler will be good enough not to speak of that—that sound—to any one?"

He deliberately tested her.

"What sound?"

She hesitated.

"That sound she imagined she heard—the sound you and she were talking about," she said at last. "I infected her with my foolish panic, and she fancied all sorts of things, just as I did. But it is too absurd to talk about."

"I won't mention it," the doctor agreed. "And I think I can speak for Mrs. Schuyler, too. I'll warn her before we go in to luncheon."

He left the room, softly closing the door behind him, and rejoined his impatient hostess in the hall.

"We simply must go in, Horace," she wailed when she saw him.

"Kawa—"

"We're going now," Osborne slipped his hand through her arm for the little promenade to the dining room. "But first I want to ask you not to speak to any one about that sound you heard. The patient's request," he added, more lightly. "She pretends to think you imagined it."

Mrs. Schuyler nodded.

"I don't want to talk about it, and I rather think I did imagine it," she agreed. "We're probably making a mountain out of a molehill."

Notwithstanding her awe of Kawa, the brief interval for reflection had restored some of Mrs. Schuyler's optimism. She was almost convinced that she had been mistaken about that sound, yet at the mere memory of it and of its effect on her secretary a slight chill wriggled down her spine. "Here's mother," she added, with relief. "She'll be enchanted to see you."

Mrs. Van Dorn, appearing at that moment, justified her daughter's prediction by greeting the doctor with almost maternal warmth. During the previous winter he had successfully brought her through an attack of double pneumonia, an achievement for which she had given full credit to her Maker. She frequently mentioned that with God's help she meant to live a century, but she called on Dr. Osborne at the slightest indication of a cold.

"Watch me all you like," she had told him in the days of her convalescence. "It's your job to keep me well. I'll take your tonics, too. But stop taking to me about exercise and fresh air. I haven't any use for either of them, and I never have had and I never will have. They're greatly overestimated, if you ask me."

"I suppose you've been in your bedroom all morning listening in at your radio, with the windows hermetically sealed, as usual," Osborne now suggested as he drew out her chair.

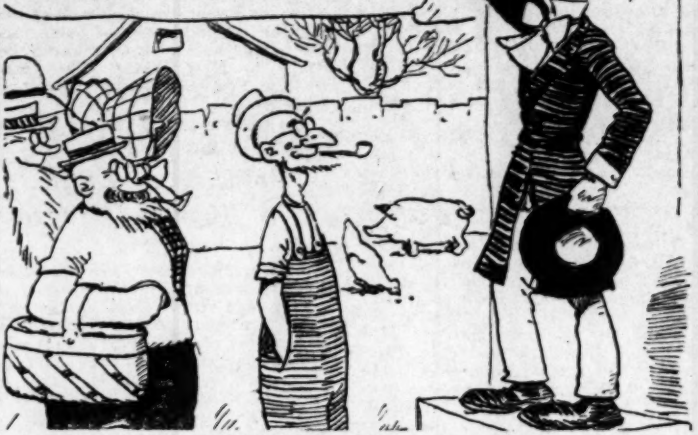

"I've been busy every single minute, but I did take a few seconds off for the radio."

The plump figure settled into the chair, an embodiment of curves and comfort.

AN AMATEUR CHANTEY.

By John McCall.

I sing a salty song—

Of bluffs and breezy straits—

Of minds that whistle strong.

Of wicked, white-fanged waves.

I sing about the wash

Of green seas o'er the rail.

The rolling, tossing. . . . Gosh,

The idea turns me pale.

If I were on the sea,

I'd be a different thing—

My appetite would flee,

I know I couldn't sing!

They All Do.

Dryman: "No wonder. He went

Wetzel: "That proved a mighty ex-Dryman: "But he didn't get the pint. The doc said the examination

PREPARED OF LEAGUE CHARGE

Philadelphia, September 26.—Joseph M. Steele, president of the Law Enforcement League of Philadelphia, tonight charged that the "very foolish move" of the league to sue William R. Nicholson, secretary of the league, to President Coolidge in which it was stated the league had evidence of political corruption by federal officials in Pennsylvania. The letter urged the president to use his influence in averting the reported threatened action of the league.

Mr. Steele today directed Attorney General Stone to investigate the matter, and the attorney general immediately wired the league suggesting that its responsible officers confer with him at an early date. In response to this suggestion the executive committee of the league met late today and decided to send "three responsible members" of the organization to Washington tomorrow to confer with Mr. Stone.

Mr. Steele said he was seriously considering resignation as president of the enforcement league.

Mr. Steele said there had been considerable correspondence among prohibition commissioners Haynes, the department of justice and the enforcement league and he expressed the belief that Mr. Nicholson had reference to this in his message to the president.

"But," added Mr. Steele, "I do not know the details."

Dawes Challenged To Try To Defend Lorimer Bank Case

Des Moines, Iowa, September 26.—Senator Burton K. Wheeler left back at the republican vice presidential candidate, Charles G. Dawes, by challenging him to "attempt to defend his participation in the Lorimer Bank case," in a speech delivered to prospects for this farm-belt region here Friday night.

The independent candidate cited court records which he contended proved that the banker-politician from Chicago helped a politician banker rob 4,000 innocent depositors of their savings.

Wheeler suggested that Dawes might come here in a few days and told his hearers to ask the republican candidate about the Lorimer case.

"The nearest he has come to answering me was in a letter to Minneapolis," Wheeler declared. "There he said that a man—Mr. What's His Name Wheeler?—the courteous way he conducted by him last summer at Mount Wilson observatory in California. The outcome, he said, was 'very promising.'"

The problem was to reduce uncertainty as to the number of miles light travels in one second of time. Dr. Michelson explained that various methods of measurement were 184,300 miles a second, the uncertainty being a matter of twenty or thirty miles, and the goal a reduction of this uncertainty to one mile.

HERE'S ILL NEWS FOR SOME HONEST YEGG CRAFTSMAN

Chicago, September 26.—The string of 181 matched pearls taken from Miss Hester White, daughter of F. Edson White, president of Armour & Company, by an armed burglar in the White home, Wednesday night, are imitations, the victim says.

The genuine pearls, which the stolen string duplicated in paste, are kept in the safety deposit vault, according to Miss White. The rings, valued at $1,500, taken by the robber, are genuine.

COOLIDGE CANVASSES POLITICAL SITUATION

Washington, September 26.—President Coolidge put in a full day at his office today despite the late return of the presidential party last night after his address at Philadelphia.

New York and California political situations were gone into by the president in conferences with Theodore Roosevelt, republican nominee for governor in New York; Representative Free, of California, and Cornelius Van derbilt, California publisher.

Mr. Roosevelt predicted an overwhelming majority for republicans in New York. Representative Free declared the California situation was clearing rapidly with the president gaining strength as support for Senator La Follette, independent candidate, waned.

Mr. Van derbilt was a guest of the president at luncheon. The visit was described as social. Mr. Coolidge having known Mr. Van derbilt as a newspaperman here.

Repeated references through various mediums here to the address prepared by Secretary Wilbur to be delivered at Denver, and presented by his recall to Washington, brought inquiries to President Coolidge today, but he said he had not read the speech.

MIDNIGHT FROLIC
AT 81 THEATER
PLEASES PATRONS
A capacity crowd of white patrons Friday night jammed into the "81 theater" to witness "Liza," the famous colored musical comedy revue. The midnight frolic was the first to be staged for white people during the season, and every seat was occupied long before the curtain rose at 11:15 o'clock.

Irvin C. Miller, negro comedian, was directing much of the revue, and played the leading role. Emmett Anthony, another colored comedian whose ability ranked with Miller's, was also featured, and especially for last night's frolic.

A blues singer of reputation threw the audience into spasms, and helped to the performance a complete success.

There was plenty of snappy music, really remarkable dancing, and all the accompanying high lights that go to make a musical comedy successful.

Test To Establish

Chicago, September 26.—Professor A. A. The outcome, he said, was "very promising."

The problem was to reduce uncertainty as to the number of miles light travels in one second of time. Dr. Michelson explained that various methods of measurement were 184,300 miles a second, the uncertainty being a matter of twenty or thirty miles, and the goal a reduction of this uncertainty to one mile.

Miller was elected to his new office at a congress of delegates in London last week. He was the first American to be elected to the post. The colonel declined to comment on his reported resignation.

Among the beneficiaries of an English library was his "bedknack" and his "help."

"The Thief of Bagdad."
(At the Atlanta.)
Positively the final performance of the greatest of all picture triumphs, Douglas Fairbanks in "The Thief of Bagdad," will take place at the Atlanta theatre today at 2:45 and 8:30. As this really great screen achievement will not again be shown in Atlanta this season, it behooves all those who have not yet seen it to make advantage of one of the two remaining performances today. All seats are reserved, and may be obtained either at the theatre box office, or at the "Ask Mr. Foster" service at M. Rich & Bros. Co. store.

"It Pays to Advertise."
(At the Lyric.)
Performances this afternoon and tonight will end the Lyric theatre engagement of "It Pays to Advertise," the explosive farce comedy of young love, ambition and enthusiasm which the Lyric Players have been presenting to big crowds of warmly appreciative people all the week.

"Secrets," the great love story by May Edginton, which Sam H. Harris produced with immense success on Broadway and in which Norma Talmadge won new fame in a First National screen adaptation, is the play for next week, opening with ladies' bargain performance Monday night.

Thomas Meighan.
(At the Howard.)
Thomas Meighan in James Oliver Curwood's "The Alaskan" will be shown at the Howard theatre for the last time today. It is a picture that no picture fan should miss. Meighan has put every bit of his acting ability into the part of Alan Holt which is the climax of the greatest work of this popular star. Nell Howe will be seen in the prologue and Mr. Forney Wyle will offer piano selections.

"Sinners in Heaven."
(At the Rialto.)
"Sinners in Heaven" ends its entirely successful engagement at the Rialto theatre with showings today. This unusual photoplay, laid in the desert of a South Sea island and made unique by a strange marriage without benefit of clergy, features Bebe Daniels and Richard Dix. "Arabia's Last Alarm" is the comedy.

Compromise Pact
In Flogging Case
Sought in Court
Alexandria, La., September 26.—Mrs. Lillian Bonnette and her husband, Sam Bonnette, were seen in an application filed in state district court today to produce an alleged original agreement of compromise with Mrs. Bonnette and her husband, Leslie B. Padgett, charged in criminal indictments with having flogged Mrs. Bonnette. The application, which declares the compromise agreement was for $12,000, was filed by counsel representing the three women. Mrs. Bonnette filed suit several months ago against the women, seeking $25,000 damages from each.

Mrs. Ball, after accusing Mrs. Bonnette with having been intimate with her husband, went to the Bonnette home, accompanied by Mrs. Jordan, her daughter, and Mrs. Padgett, according to papers in the damage suit, forced Mrs. Bonnette into an automobile and, taking her into the woods, stripped and flogged her. Mrs. Bonnette a short time previously had returned home from a hospital after a major operation.

Ball was a prominent lumberman and banker here and after the affair disappeared.

The three women were secretly indicted by the grand jury in connection with the flogging and additional indictments were returned against Mrs. Ball and her daughter, charging that they had attempted to slay Ball by shooting at him with a pistol.

Trial of the women on the criminal charges has been set for the term of court beginning October 25.

DAUGHTER OF DAVIS WILL DIRECT DRIVE
FOR YOUNG VOTERS
Washington, September 26.—Mrs. Norman McMillan Adams, daughter of John W. Davis, democratic candidate for president, has been appointed director of the young voters' division of the "victory vote drive," to be started next week by the democratic national committee.

Mrs. Adams, it was announced today by the committee, will direct her part of the campaign from New York after Washington, seeking chiefly to interest "first voters" in the ticket headed by her father.

The committee also made it clear today that Mr. Davis' visit to Washington Saturday would be informal.

No. 223 East Avenue
This is a five-room cottage near Alaska avenue, situated on a lot 57x165. It is only one block from the car line on Highland avenue. East house has recently been paved with concrete and a number of new houses have been built in the street.

The place we have for sale is only about three blocks from Forrest Avenue school and is situated in that portion of East avenue which is free from any objectionable surroundings. We offer this house at the bargain price of $3,000. It has a straight loan of $1,750 bearing 8% interest and maturing in July, 1926. This leaves an equity of $1,250, of which $750 must be paid in cash.

Due to the fact that we want to sell this house quickly we have made a price on it hoping that the first buyer who goes out and looks at it will decide to take it. From time to time we have opportunities of this kind to sell places at less than their worth and we are glad to give our customers the benefit of the transaction.
